Helping Hand

SEYMOUR — The engineer of a Green Bay and Western freight train stopped the train and got out Monday afternoon to aid a route 3 youth whose hand got caught in a corn picking machine on his father's farm.

Edward Stephani, 18, was satisfactory today at St. Mary Hospital, Green Bay, where he underwent surgery Monday afternoon on his right hand.

Outagamie County police said Stephani was working on the farm of his father, Ervin, when, while apparently trying to free corn cobs, his right hand became lodged in rollers on the machine.

Stephani, police said, waved for help, and was noticed by the engineer in the freight train that passed within 1,000 feet of the farm. The engineer and other railroad personnel freed Stephani's hand, and summoned the Seymour rescue squad.

The farm is about a mile west of here.

Arrests Stunt Protest; Troops Leave Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-war protesters' hopes of rekindling guerrilla-style efforts to halt the nation's government disintegrated today and the 4,000 federal troops began withdrawing from the streets and bridges of the capital.

Wholesale arrests of more than 7,000 persons Monday appeared to have broken the back of the planned three days of disruptions.

As the Marines, paratroopers and other federal troops began withdrawing from the capital, police reported another 360 arrests had been made today as demoralized bands of young people wandered the streets, apparently leaderless and without design.

Praise From Nixon

At a White House breakfast with Republican congressional leaders, President Nixon praised police, District of Columbia officials and the attorney general "for the way they handled demonstrators and the restraint exhibited," said Senate GOP Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

Scott said Nixon also reiterated that demonstrations for peace abroad did not include the right to break the peace at home.

The federal troops, who had moved into the city at the height of Monday's disorders, were pulled back to staging positions in the suburbs. But there was no move to return to their bases the 10,000 troops who had been mobilized during the weekend.

Of the total, 6,000 had not been deployed.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim told reporters that task force commanders have "begun to withdraw federal troops from the city" and expressed hope it was the "first step toward returning federal troops to their normal duties."

The disengagement of troops still left thousands of police to watch warily over the city.

Rush hour traffic—lighter than usual—moved smoothly.

Protest organizers, who had promised to send 10,000 persons into the streets today, talked of a mid-day march on the Justice Department.

But an early morning march from Washington Circle to Du-Pont Circle, two of the four traffic circles targeted for today's disruptions, resulted in most of the marchers being arrested.

Most of today's arrests came without incident and without the tear gas volleys and billy club swinging of Monday.

Charges of disorderly conduct, obstructing traffic, loitering or unlawful assembly were lodged against most of those arrested today—although several older, well-dressed, well-groomed pedestrians were arrested for jaywalking and hauled off in police paddywagons.

Police vehicles did more to cause brief traffic jams than did the demonstrators.

Said one long-haired youth: "Everything has broken down today . . . some people are out of it."

Said another: "I'm too tired."

Olive green Army helicopters fluttered over the city. One police copter, circling over major commuter arteries, radioed that rush hour traffic was "better than normal" in several areas.

As the rush hour began, traffic flowed smoothly across the four Potomac River bridges which were the target of Monday's disruption. Street cleaning machines crisscrossed the bridges an hour before dawn to clear away a scattering of nails and tacks.

The demonstrators conceded police and military forces had prevailed a day earlier, when the largest groups tried to block the four major bridges into Virginia without lasting success. Marine and Army troops resumed their patrols of the bridges early this morning. The soldiers were spread no more than 20 feet apart on each span.

Wide Range

The disruptions Monday ranged from peaceful sitdowns at busy intersections to sheer vandalism. Hundreds of trash bins, bricks, bottles, and other debris were thrown into the streets. Many cars were abandoned at intersections, some set afire. Fuel lines were snipped on buses, and several motorists, including Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz., had their tires slashed.

There were several incidents of protesters exchanging blows with police, although reports of serious injuries were scant. About 100 persons were treated at area hospitals.

Courtroom Jam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Courtrooms in the nation's capital, where the slightest misdemeanor is a federal case, turned into an endless factory as judges worked overtime setting bond for 7,000 antiwar protesters arrested for disrupting the streets of Washington.

The bond was high in many cases, the judges tough, the process labored, the defendants uncertain.

Some lawyers contended the courts were trying to keep the demonstrators off the streets by setting excessive bail. The judges indicated the government is interested in convicting the demonstrators.

There were claims that some of those arrested had nothing to do with the waves of demonstrators who had played tag with police while slowing rush-hour traffic.

Out for Walk

A man identifying himself as a psychiatrist said six young persons under treatment for mental disorders were swept up by riot-garbed police near George Washington University. The patients and two attendants were said to have been arrested as they went for a therapeutic walk.

Dr. Benjamin Spock, the pediatrician, antiwar activist and one of the first released on bail, said a 12-year-old boy and a 13-year-old girl were held with 2,000 demonstrators in an outdoor compound until their parents arranged for their freedom.

Robert Hibbard, 28, of Austin, Tex., another released on $10 collateral, said the compound also held a little girl carrying school books, an Army lieutenant, several businessmen, an off-duty policeman, three medical students, a doctor and two nurses.

In the courtrooms, the wheels of justice turned slowly.

Twelve defendants had an idle moment in Judge Edward Daley's Superior Courtroom before their group was escorted from the jury box and another dozen hauled in from holding cells.

One youth in a t-shirt, blond hair tied behind his head, raised his hand to speak.

"Will we get something to eat, Your Honor?"

"The court has every assurance you will be fed," Daley said.

"It's been 12 hours," the youth pleaded, but was cut off by the judge.

"If you hadn't come to Washington, you wouldn't be in that spot. You're the people who started it."

The young man rested his head wearily on the rail of the jury box, listening to the disorderly-conduct charge lodged against him and most of the others. The maximum penalty is a $250 fine and 90 days in jail.

The usual bond is $10; Monday it was usually $250. Or, if a defendant could find a friend whose answers satisfied the judge, he could be released into the friend's custody pending trial.

Few of the demonstrators could post $250 bond and, after a trial date was set two or three weeks hence, they were shuttled back to jail, or to the holding compound on a practice field behind Robert F. Kennedy Stadium. As night fell, the compound was emptied into Washington Coliseum.

Even with eight judges in late-night sessions, the process was painfully slow.

And near midnight, Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson ordered jail clerks to release on $10 collateral those defendants charged with minor offenses.

Kent State Pays Tribute to Dead

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Flags rippled at half staff at Kent State University today while students carried flickering candles through long hours of a memorial vigil to the four students killed a year ago in a clash with National Guardsmen.

Leaders of a rebel May Day Coalition—their ranks thinned by the arrests of demonstrators in Washington — announced plans to test a campus ban against outside speakers. Plans to shut down by sit-in the campus ROTC facilities assumed a symbolic nature.

The university reported up to 5,000 students started the candlelight memorial tribute to their slain classmates Monday night. Only a dozen remained by their candles at daylight and seven of them huddled in sleeping bags.

Leftist Coalition

A bright crisp spring day killed the glowing effect the candles gave in the nighttime chill.

The coalition, which claims to represent 13 leftist organizations, announced plans to test a university ban on outside speakers during the memorial observance.

The coalition also is seeking to abolish a system of campus speakers, to have police disarmed, remove undercover agents from the campus and wants to have 25 indictments stemming from last year's disorders condemned.

The coalition also said it wants a state campus disorders law repealed.

Coalition organizer Ken Johnson said at least 30 members of the group are among the thousands of persons arrested in Washington, including Bill Arthrell, Kent student and campus Yippie leader.

Gov. John J. Gilligan ordered flags on all state buildings flown at half staff today to honor the memory of the four students. He said, "This gesture will serve as a symbol of the necessity for all of us to work toward peace, tranquility and justice and to see that the tragedy of May 4, 1970, is never repeated.

"I hope that every Ohioen—and every American — has learned a lesson about violence. I hope each of us can see clearly that violence — even verbal violence—does nothing but tear our society to pieces."

Some 5,000 of Kent State's 19,482 students gathered for a candlelight vigil Monday night at the shooting scene near the campus' Blanket Hill.

Their faces glowing in the soft light of the candles many held, students formed circles around the spots where the four bodies lay a year ago.

Individual students stood motionless to mark the four spots. Students were to remain at each place, in half-hour shifts, until midnight tonight.

In a memorial service at the school gymnasium, a member of the President's Commission on Campus Unrest which probed the Kent State shooting criticized President Nixon for failure to follow the commission's recommendation that the war in Indochina be ended.

"His response to this has been to sponsor an invasion of Laos and continue the slaughter," said James F. Ahren, former police chief of New Haven, Conn.

Speculators Nip Dollar's Value

U.S. Currency at Lowest Level in European Market

LONDON (AP) — Currency speculators sent the dollar reeling on European exchanges today, and the flood of U.S. money exchanged for West German marks, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs threatened to send inflation in Europe soaring further.

The dollar was on the floor in Frankfurt and Zurich. Only heavy buying by the Bank of England kept the rate just off the mandatory intervention point of $2.42 to the pound.

Anxiety over the monetary situation drove the price of gold up in the London and Zurich free markets. The jump was 43 cents in London to $39.86, the highest level since the 1969 crisis over the unervaluation of the mark.

West Germany's Central Bank was reported to have taken in $250 million to $300 million in the first hours of trading today and more than $120 million in the last hour Monday.

Zurich Sales

"Substantial" dollar sales were reported in Zurich. The smaller Amsterdam market was also caught in the flurry, with $20 million reported taken in late trading Monday.

The speculation apparently was touched off by the call from five West German economic research institutes Monday for the mark—now pegged at 27 cents—to be set free in world markets to combat inflation.

Speculators saw a chance of a quick profit, anticipating another upward revaluation of the mark that might even force the guilder and the Swiss franc to go up too.

2 Pulitzer Prizes Given for Kent State Shooting Coverage

NEW YORK (AP) — Two Pulitzer prizes have been awarded for coverage of the Kent State University campus tragedy in which Ohio National Guardsmen killed four students and wounded nine others a year ago today.

The staff of the Akron, Ohio, Beacon Journal won the general local reporting award Monday for its work in piecing together the story of the shootings under deadline pressure.

In the arts, the 1971 Pulitzer prize for drama went to Paul Zindel's "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds"—the second year in a row an off-Broadway play won the award.

No Fiction Prize

For the first time since 1964 no fiction prize was awarded. The fiction jurors were reported to have offered three different candidates for awards: "Mr. Sammler's Planet," by Saul Bellow; "Losing Battles," by Eudora Welty, and "The Wheel of Love and Other Stories," by Joyce Carol Oates.

The award to the Akron Beacon Journal noted its balanced presentation of the campus events despite wild rumors. Robert H. Giles, managing editor of the Knight newspaper, said, "We're delighted to have been so honored.

"We received a good deal of criticism from public officials and our readers at the time many of our stories were published," Giles added. "I think all of our stories stood the test of truth over the time since then."

Saw Body

Filo was a photo lab assistant at Kent State at the time of the tragedy. He had gone out for lunch with a borrowed camera and lens when the shooting began. He recalled seeing the body and the girl kneel beside it.

"There were students blocking my view so I moved to the left and waited. I was near the end of the roll of film and she was just looking down, crying, and then she let out with this scream and that's when I made the picture."

The Pulitzer prize for national reporting went to Lucinda Franks, 24, and Thomas Powers, 30, of United Press International for their background exploration of Diana Oughton, 28, killed in the explosion of a bomb factory in a Greenwich Village townhouse.

"We hoped the story would tell things about young people that needed to be told," said Powers, "and apparently, to at least some degree, we succeeded."

The prize for public service by a newspaper went to the Winston-Salem, N.C., Journal and Sentinel for their coverage of environmental problems including a successful fight against a proposed strip mining operation that would have blighted the beauty of northwestern North Carolina.

Environmental Impact

"We felt that if we told the people of the environmental impact of strip mining that they could make a decision wisely as to what it would do to their area," said Journal managing editor Fred Flagler.

The Pulitzer prize for international reporting went to Jimmie Lee Hoagland, 31, of the Washington Post for reporting on South Africa's apartheid system. "It is particularly ratifying to win on a story off the spot news," commented Ben Bradlee, the Post's executive editor.

William Jones, 31, of the Chicago Tribune, won the Pulitzer prize for special local reporting for an investigative series that exposed payoffs to police in the private ambulance industry.

Jones, who received news of the award while on his way to testify in court in another investigative case, recalled receiving threats in connection with the series. "I was forced to move my family out of the house for a week and I had a sheriff's deputy assigned to me," he said.

Second Prize

Paul Conrad was at work at the Los Angeles Times when he learned he had won his second Pulitzer prize in seven years for cartooning. He first won in 1964 while working for the Denver Post.

Conrad, 47, submitted 10 cartoons, one a particularly biting comment on the My Lai massacre. "Paul Conrad's work, often harsh, always controversial, is social criticism at the gut level," said Times editor Nick Williams.

(Conrad's editorial cartoons appear frequently in The Post-Crescent).

The feature photography prize went to Jack Dykinga, 28, of the Chicago Sun-Times, for pictures of children in the Lincoln and Dixon State School for the Retarded in Illinois.

"It was hard getting used to that situation and I remem-

World Sees Germany Change

By HUBERT J. ERB
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — Walter Ulbricht's retirement from the direction of East Germany's ruling Communist party raises questions of major importance about the future of the two Germanys, but no one in the West knows the answers yet.

Will Ulbricht's successor as party first secretary, Erich Honecker, take a softer stance toward West Germany? The Bonn government is likely to probe cautiously to find out.

Will Soviet demands in the Big Four talks on Berlin ease?

Honecker

Some observers believe Ulbricht's pressure on the Russians made them hold out for even more than Moscow itself felt necessary.

Will West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's campaign to improve relations between his government and the Soviet bloc regimes meet with more success now? Brandt's government had accused Ulbricht of blocking the desires of other Communist governments for ties with Bonn.

What will happen to the Berlin Wall, one of Ulbricht's most conspicuous legacies? Will West Berliners be allowed more access to relatives and friends in East Berlin and East Germany?

How will the East Germans react to the shelving of the Communist world's most prominent Stalinist? Will they be harder to handle?

Herbert Wehne, one of Brandt's chief aides who knew Ulbricht before World War II when both were Communist exiles, once predicted what would happen when Ulbricht passed from power:

"At first the party leaders will rally around the new man. There will be an uncertainty and there will be no quick experiments. But after a while, after they have seen if they can handle things without Ulbricht, who knows what they will do? No one can tell."

Not Optimistic

Mayor Klaus Schuetz of West Berlin was not optimistic. He said Ulbright's retirement is an event of great significance, but "nothing has changed for us in West Berlin. We must accept this realistically and without illusions."

Ulbricht, the architect under Stalin of the East German state and a founder of the German Communist party half a century ago, resigned Monday from his all-important party post. Age was given as the reason; he will be 78 on June 30.

The party Central Committee named Honecker, 58-year-old secretary for security and another hard-liner, to be first secretary and created the new, largely ceremonial post of party chairman for the spade-bearded, bespectacled old leader. Ulbricht also continues to be chairman of the state council, or East Germany's president.

Ulbricht stepped down without gaining his primary goal in 22 years of trying. He failed to get his regime the international recognition by the West—and especially by West Germany—which he sought so hard to obtain.

This alone indicated that Ulbricht no longer was able to carry on. There was speculation that he was too ill to continue, or that the Russians helped ease him out.

Sentiment Showed

As recently as March last year, when Brandt went to Erfurt for a meeting with the East Germans, the East German people showed their displeasure with Communist rule. Despite intense police measures, there was an outpouring of public sentiment for the West German leader.

Ulbricht by contrast was the most unpopular leader in the Soviet Bloc, at home and abroad. But the Soviet Union has about 20 divisions in East Germany and it has expressed confidence in Honecker. The latter, who became heir apparent through leadership of the East German youth and then of the security forces, has a tough guy image of his own.

Honecker is by birth a West German, born in the Saar. Regarded as an ice-cold tactician, he was the No. 2 man behind Ulbricht as head of the security apparatus, with influence far beyond that of Premier Willi Stoph.

Communist at 10

A Communist since the age of 10, Honecker spent World War II a prisoner of the Nazis. He became a member of the Communist party Central Committee in 1950 after five years as a leader of the Free German Youth, the FDJ. His wife, Margot Feist, 44, a former FDJ children's organizer, is now minister of national education. She is the only woman member of the Cabinet.

In contrast to the austere Ulbricht, Honecker has a reputation for liking the good life and is a motor boat enthusiast.

Resor Has Praise For Vietnamization

SAIGON (AP) — Army Secretary Stanely R. Resor said today the Vietnamization program is making encouraging progress, but a difficult period lies ahead as more American combat troops are withdrawn.

As the withdrawal continues, Resor told a news conference after an eight-day visit to South Vietnam, the American "advisory effort becomes increasingly important."

"As I travelled around the country," he continued, "I was particularly impressed with the capable people serving in our advisory teams. We have made extensive efforts over the past year to attract our best officers into these teams and I believe it's clear that we're doing so.

"In addition, most of these officers have had prior experience in Vietnam. As our force levels are phasing down, our young troops are faced with a most difficult job. But they're doing it well. As we phase down we're getting a higher level of experience in our officers and noncommissioned officers in the units which remain. More of our company commanders are captains now. We have a higher complement of experienced noncommissioned officers."

Summing up the progress of Vietnamization, Resor said the South Vietnamese army has assumed responsibility for combat operations in a great many areas in which U.S. troops previously operated and "has demonstrated on numerous occasions that it is capable of assuming that responsibility.

"The territorial forces (militiamen) have continued to improve," he went on. "While much remains to be done, it is evident that in many areas they are providing the necessary security at the local level to allow social and economic development to proceed. The South Vietnamese have now taken over military responsibility through most of the country."

The secretary said nine major army bases of brigade size or larger and 125 smaller bases have been turned over to the South Vietnamese and more than a million tons of equipment and supplies have been shipped back to the United States.

"The program is on schedule and no significant problems are anticipated," he declared as he left for Korea.

Sen. Nelson Asks for Sanguine Showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's Appropriations Committee was asked Monday by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., for a showdown with the Navy over the millions of dollars spent for Project Sanguine.

Nelson, citing a University of Wisconsin report which labels the proposed radio project technically unfeasible, said the Pentagon should be asked to reply to questions raised in the report.

Unless the Navy can come across with adequate answers, further funding of the northern Wisconsin project should be halted, Nelson said in his request to the committee chairman, Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La.

The UW report, prepared by a team of scientists, noted the Navy has spent about $50 million in tests, and estimated it could cost $1.5 billion to build Sanguine's network of underground antenna and power plants across the state's north woods.

"Won't Work"

Besides the cost, the professors said, the radio won't work. They said it would take two hours to transmit a 12-letter message as far around the world as the Navy has said it would like to.

The project has been criticized by Nelson and by environmentalists as potentially damaging to national forest terrain because of the miles of ditches that would be dug to house the antenna.

The powerful electrical currents in the antenna grid would be a threat to human life, opponents say.

Nelson said he is asking John H. Chafee, secretary of the Navy, for an independent technical committee to review the project plans and the UW report.

"It would seem wise from every standpoint that the Appropriations Committee not appropriate funds," Nelson said, "until there has been an adequate opportunity for study and evaluation."

Met by Protests

When Navy plans for a grid of cables in a 22,000-square-mile area were met by protests from conservationists, the Pentagon asked Congress for $2 million more to study a theory that the cables could be concealed in 30-and 40-mile tunnels thousands of feet beneath the surface of the forests.

Taxi Driver Shot in Head

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Riley Campbell, 43, a cab driver, was in critical condition today after being shot in the head three times in his taxi on an East Side street.

Campbell was found slumped behind the steering wheel of his cab, which had veered out of control and came to a stop beside a home early today.

Last October, Claude Carroll Jr., 47, a cab driver on his first day at work, was shot and killed as he was driving on the North Side. He also was shot three times in the head.

Suit Names Mayor, Police In Madison

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Five young persons who said they were injured in Mifflin Street disturbances two years ago filed suit in U.S. District Court Monday for nearly $700,000 in damages.

Named defendants were Mayor William Dyke and three police officials.

Thomas Rosenberg, Michael Schriber and Donald Shapiro said officers broke into their Mifflin Street apartment and "without provocation or legal cause, did then and there want only and maliciously assault, batter, beat and gas," causing serious wounds.

Each asks $100,000 in damages plus medical costs.

Two other persons, Yardenna Hurvitz and Linda Wendnagel, who the complaint said were witness, are seeking $120,000 each for "great fright, apprehension, nervousness, and mental anguish."

Three days of skirmishes between young persons and police erupted after authorities attempted to halt a street dance in Mifflin Street's hippie neighborhood.

Few to be Affected Soon By Ruling on Death Penalty

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Superior Court has cleared the way for executions but many governors and prison officials indicate few condemned convicts will be immediately affected.

Many of the 651 Death Row inmates in 32 states are still appealing their death sentences. In some states, those who have exhausted appeals will have their execution dates set. In other states officials say they will not execute anyone until the court rules on the constitutionality of the death penalty itself.

The argument that death is cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Constitution has been put to the court several times, but the Supreme Court has never ruled directly on the issue.

The Supreme Court ruled Monday that a jury had the and death. The ruling upheld first-degree murder convictions and death sentences for James E. Crampton of Toledo, Ohio, and Dennis C. McGautha of Los Angeles.

In Ohio, Gov. John J. Gilligan said Monday that neither Crampton nor 49 others sentenced to die in his state will be executed unless the court rules specifically on the constitutionality of capital punishment.

McGautha becomes one of 15 or 20 of the 99 inmates on California's death row at San Quentin who have exhausted appeals and whose dates of execution will now be set, said Associate Warden James Park.

Few condemned inmates in other state prisons, officials power to decide between life say, can be assigned such dates soon.

The ruling, said Washington Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton, "removes one obstacle in the way of an execution happening. But most men on death row in this state have other appeals not directly involved in this decision. It is unlikely it automatically involves any of them."

In Texas, the director of the state's Department of Corrections, Dr. George Beto, predicted there would be no more executions.

"I think we've gone too long without an execution for anyone to die now," he said. Forty-three men face death in the Texas electric chair.

Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter affirmed he still favors the death penalty, faced by 17 persons in his state.

"I do not believe at this time society can afford to forego the use of the death penalty," he said. "I do believe this is a deterrent."

The last execution in the United States was on June 2, 1967.

More Than Half Die

Addicts Can Spare Babies' Agony

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Women heroin addicts may save their babies from most of the physical agony of withdrawal by submitting to methadone treatment during pregnancy, a medical specialist reports.

Babies born to 22 women in a control group that took methadone avoided most of the severe withdrawal symptoms that affected infants of 21 women studied who did not receive the synthetic drug, Dr. James F. Connaughton Jr. said Monday.

Infants of untreated addict mothers suffered convulsions, protracted shrill crying, diarrhea, sleeplessness, regurgitation, hypertension, frantic fist-sucking and other symptoms, Connaughton told a six-day meeting of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Connaughton is a resident in obstetrics and gynecology at Philadelphia General Hospital, which last September opened a methadone clinic offering prenatal care as well as therapy to addicted patients.

"The comprehensive nature of the care has markedly diminished many of the serious complications of pregnancy" for the 22 treated women, Connaughton said.

Addicts not already being treated are admitted to the methadone maintenance program and receive about 10 milligrams of methadone each day for each bag of heroin previously used daily. A moderate habit requires about 80 milligrams of methadone a day, he said.

Connaughton said published research shows a death rate of 50 to 93 per cent for infants of addict mothers.

Ten babies in the untreated group suffered severe withdrawal and all but two required withdrawal therapy for at least 10 days he said.

In the treated group, eight required no therapy and 14 suffered mild or moderate withdrawal.

Four infants in the treated group had severe symptoms, but their mothers were women with large habits who admitted to secret use of heroin within three days prior to delivery.

In the untreated group, most infants were of low birth weight, nine weighing less than 5½ pounds. Three of the 22 babies in the treated group were premature by weight.

Cleanup of Fox Cited as Pollution Priority

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pulp paper mills have made Wisconsin's Fox River "one of the two most polluted waterways discharging into Lake Michigan," a federal environmental spokesman said Monday.

Thomas E. Carroll, assistant planning administrator for the Environmental Protection Agency, said Wisconsin must crack down on pollution of the Fox and on pollution from Milwaukee's sewage system.

He made his remarks to an environment symposium while the U.S. Supreme Court was announcing its willingness to hear a suit in which Illinois accuses Wisconsin port cities of polluting Lake Michigan.

The suit accuses Milwaukee, South Milwaukee, Racine and Kenosha of allowing raw sewage to escape treatment plants and foul the lake. Illinois has asked the Supreme Court to take jurisdiction in the matter.

States Take Lead

Carroll told the 8th annual symposium states have taken the lead in encouraging the federal government's recent moves against polluters.

He cited, as an example, Wisconsin's stand at the March meeting of the Lake Michigan Enforcement Conference which, overcame federal and Illinois reluctance to establish tougher control of thermal pollution of lake waters.

But the state should be equally tough about phosphate, human waste and other waste effluent reaching the lake at Milwaukee and Green Bay, he said

Eighteen paper mills along the Fox River represent "the Green Bay problem," Carroll said

He said the paper mills are producing effluent in volume equal to that of sewage of 2 million persons. The river also carries effluent from sewage treatment plants representing 300,000 persons, he added.

The mills should be ordered immediately to cut "at least 80 per cent and perhaps 90 per cent of the phosphorus out of their effluent," Carroll said.

"We need a longer-range program too," he said. "We must see what else is wrong with the Fox."

Carroll said Wisconsin has frequently been a national leader in fighting pollution, from the first U.S. prohibition against super-suds detergents to 1968's early-bird government approval of water quality standards.

Municipal Compliance

Unfortunately, the record is marred by the state's being one of the slowest with schedules for municipal compliance with timetables for improvement of sewage treatment facilities.

"The delays and procedural red tape must be cut down," Carroll told about 400 persons at a symposium session.

If pollution is to be controlled, industry must lead the way — and it is, the environmental control director of the state's largest paper company said in presenting industry's side of the problem.

Richard M. Billings of Kimberly-Clark Corp. said that while pollution is everybody's problem, industry can make the greatest contribution to its solution and it has done a responsible job to date.

Industry's Progress

In a progress report on pollution abatement, Billings also said that industry acknowledges that pollution of the environment is probably the greatest challenge of the decade and must be controlled soon.

The public should not measure accomplishments in pollution abatement strictly on the basis of dollars and cents, he said. Results obtained are a far better yardstick. He stressed that sincere concern about the environment is greater than ever before and, despite some reports to the contrary, industry wants it to stay that way.

Billings reported that in he last 12 to 15 years total oxygen demanding wastes from his company's pulp and paper mills in the United States have been reduced by more than half. Pollution in the form of suspended solids also has been reduced, he said, and by 1972, when Kimberly-Clark's present pollution abatement projects are completed, the pounds of suspended solids also will be less than half of what they were 15 years ago.

Increased Production

"These reductions have been achieved in spite of the fact that two big mills have started up during this period and that most of the existing mills have substantially increased production," Billings noted.

"Today's solutions to pollution problems may not be adequate tomorrow in the face of increasing national growth and more research breakthroughs will be needed," he said, adding that his firm is designing and building its treatment and abatement systems with this situation in mind

Even though there is impatience about the speed at which pollution abatement problems are being solved, careful planning of the solutions is essential, Billings said.

"The magnitude of each job is such that it won't permit us to make a mistake," he said, because the cost of a mistake could be a million dollars, "and that's the kind of a financial blow that some mills might not be able to survive"

Prophecies of Doom

Sol Burstein, senior vice president of Wisconsin Electric Power Co. was critical of environmentalists with their complaints and prophecies of doom.

Even though everyone is for clean air and water," some of us have to live in a real world" he said. Industry's job is to use human and material resources to create something of value, he claimed.

Electric power utilities, he said, have met their responsibilities in providing adequate levels of power while seeking production economies and working on a pollution control program since 1939.

"We don't want uncontrolled growth, but we can't just turn ourselves off," he said, again stressing that his industry is concerned with pollution.

Charles Stoddard, an environmental consultant at Minong, said urban sprawl is a main cause of the state's waste disposal problem, having produced a shortage of treatment capacity and landfill sites.

Stoddard said citizens must organize pressure groups to encourage government action.

An assistant attorney general, Robert McConnell, said anti-pollution enforcers must be selective about priorities.

"I don't think we can concentrate on a cheese factory in a little town," he said. "We have to concentrate on municipalities and major industrial sources.

Wisconsin's secretary of natural resources, Lester P. Voigt, said the state will abate pollution when it works on it at the same pace it undertook to salvage its woodland from the lumber industry.

Stoddard said logging and runaway fires left northern Wisconsin a badly scarred wasteland a few decades ago.

"But during the 1930s, the state instituted forest fire protection and began soil conservation programs, showing that something could be done about the environment," he said.

Fremont Youth Found Delinquent

A route 1, Fremont, boy was found delinquent and placed on six months' supervision to the Outagamie County Department of Social Services Monday afternoon after being found guilty of theft and reckless driving.

County Judge Raymond P. Dohr, of Juvenile Court, forbade the 15-year-old from applying for a driver's license until a year after his 16th birthday

Witnesses for the state Monday said that the boy had fled from a Suamico service station Dec. 6 without paying for $3 worth of gasoline, while the gas hose was still in his auto's fill pipe

The hose whipped around and struck an attendant, who sought medical treatment Authorities apprehended the boy after a chase by the station owner that led into Oconto County.

Restitution of $43 was ordered. Juvenile offenders may be tried in either the county of the offense or county where they reside

Women Held After Fire Kills Two Young Girls

OCONOMOWOC, Wis (AP) —Two young sisters, 4-year-old Mary Kay Hagness and Marlene Mary Hagness, 9, were killed Monday night in a fire that raged through their two-story frame home

But authorities said the girls' 15-year-old sister, Nancy Kay, escaped by jumping from an upstairs bedroom window.

The victims were the children of Mr. and Mrs Roger Hagness.

Authorities said a woman was being held in the Waukesha County jail in connection with the fire but refused to immediately disclose additional details regarding it.

Bond Set at $1,000 For Omro Man in Indecent Liberties Case

OSHKOSH — Bond was set at $1,000 Monday for an Omro man charged with taking indecent liberties with a minor

The complaint alleged that Kenneth Amundson, 42, of 439 Madison Ave., had sexual intercourse with a 15-year-old girl who is pregnant.

The charge was brought after Omro citizens complained to the police and the district attorney. Amundson will appear in court Friday for a preliminary examination.

The Drug Epidemic in Vietnam

A committee has returned from a study of the drug traffic in Indochina, especially that among American military men stationed there, and the findings are chilling.

Estimates range all the way to 80 per cent as to the number of our troops stationed there who have tried an illegal drug — usually marijuana — at least once. But of greater concern is the percentage who are hooked on heroin, which means a chemical reliance, in contrast to what may be only a psychological dependence upon pot. According to Representative Robert Steele, a member of the committee, 35,000 to 40,000 Americans, roughly 15 to 20 per cent of those in Vietnam, are heroin addicts.

The United States has tried to reduce the nearly epidemic proportions of the drug-taking by offering amnesty to members of the armed forces who voluntarily admit their condition and who seek help and withdrawal. But treatment facilities are inadequate. And while various surveys have shown that few Americans smoke reefers before going into combat, the same conclusions cannot be drawn about the heroin addict who desperately needs a fix regularly whatever his military orders may be.

Many in this country may jump to the conclusion that the drugs originate in mainland China and it's all part of plot to undermine our armed forces. But the committee found that there is a triangle of Southeast Asia involved and that the drugs come primarily from Laos, Thailand and Hong Kong. This has meant that there is less to ship overseas as had been done previously — the harvesting of opium is commonplace in Southeast Asia as in Turkey — but it also means that roadside stands in Vietnam are set up with the expressed purpose of selling almost pure heroin to American G.I.s It's obvious there is collusion with some high-ranking Vietnamese officials and perhaps some Americans are also getting a cut of the profits.

The success of the traffic indicates the boredom, frustration and disillusion of many American troops in Vietnam. But the dangers do not stop with the harm to the individual soldier or what must be his lack of effectiveness and efficiency in the role he must play in Vietnam. Over there a heroin addict may support his habit on about $8 a day. Back in the United States it will cost $80. Already our drug treatment facilities are crowded. The great majority of "cured" addicts return to drugs within a year of release. The possibilities of high unemployment rates, of opposition to the war which sometimes manifests itself in rejection of those who had to fight it, the racial prejudices which have hardened rather than abated in many areas, the very difficulties of adjusting to civilian life from the military, all can contribute to a continued use of hard drugs or an escape from bitter realities.

The facts are in. The nation should not be caught unaware as the war is cut back and more and more American troops come home. The drug problems we have on our campuses and in our urban ghettoes may be nothing compared to what is coming.

Name-Calling Can Hurt

Sticks and stones may break your bones, but names may hurt, too, especially if a judge finds out you used those names about a police officer.

That's what an Ohio youth discovered after he happened by a policeman filling out a speeding ticket and called him a pig. He was charged with abusing a police officer. The youth pleaded no contest, was fined $100, given a suspended 30-day sentence in the workhouse and sentenced to spend three hours in a pigpen. The judge said the pigpen stay was so that the youth "should be able to distinguish, with no doubt in his mind, the difference between a pig and a police officer."

The judge's idea contains parts of the practical as well as the whimsical. Name-calling in our polarized society will get us precisely nowhere. The use of the word "pig" to describe policemen is one example. But there are others, like "nigger" for blacks, "lazy, no good hippy" for persons with long hair or beards, or "drunken Indian" for the first settlers on this continent.

Such derogatory and blanket labels may give us a sense of superiority when we use them. They let us blame someone else for our troubles. They try to excuse us from the inexcusable obligation of learning to know others as persons, not as stereotypes.

Funny Business in Madison

The reversal of the decision of the Wisconsin State Building Commission on the question of authorizing an extension of state bonding for the financing of recreation and physical education facilities at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay and the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee by means of a secret mail ballot of its members was an unfortunate, unworthy, tricky and very possibly an illegal bit of business at Madison.

The very spirit of the Wisconsin anti-secrecy law ought to limit mail balloting on such questions to issues of clear and present emergency. The appearance of conniving and stealth that was here presented is aggravated by the fact that the same commission a few days before had rejected these plans, and a similar plan for Wisconsin State University at Oshkosh, with members acting for the public record in an open meeting with free discussion and with reporters as representatives of the public listening and relaying the actions.

The irregularity is made the more glaring, if that is possible, by the fact that the secret and unannounced mail ballot failed to reverse the decision openly made earlier with respect to Oshkosh. Sen. Steinhilber of Oshkosh has denounced these proceedings, as he had every right to do on principle. But no doubt here he had a more exigent reason, since he is a Republican and Democrats were prominently involved in the espousal of the project authorizations endorsed in the second and non-public proceeding.

We are especially disappointed about the ambiguous position, and worse, in which Gov. Lucey as the chairman of the commission finds himself.

Mr. Lucey heads a Wisconsin political party that has had a strong posture on issues of secrecy in governmental business. Yet now it turns out that almost before the minutes of the public meeting of the commission had been written by its secretary, the governor was assuring officials of the Green Bay UW campus that they would have their project in spite of the negative vote then on the record. Mr. Lucey in the earlier proceedings supported the opposition to the several bonding proposals upon the advice of his commissioner of administration, Mr. Nusbaum.

The incident was noted by our chief Madison correspondent, who after consultations with administration representatives, concluded that the record suggested a desire by the Lucey regime to impose a "hold down" on state debt accumulation, and thereupon wrote two succeeding commentaries on this significant news as borne out by the record.

Altogether, there is an unsavory connotation here and community appreciation of the apparent assurance of a major campus facility extension in Green Bay and its importance to northeastern Wisconsin cannot mitigate it.

First National Bank Underway

100 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Crescent from May 13, 1871.

In a few days, the excavation will be complete and the contractors will commence laying the basement walls for the First National Bank Building. (This bank was on the southwest corner of College Avenue and Appleton Street, across the street from the present First National Bank. The original building, remodeled several times, is still standing.)

A city print took occasion recently to condemn the action of the directors in letting contracts to "outside parties" or non-residents.

The fact is, sealed proposals were invited and the parties to whom the contract was awarded — Messrs. Bell & Rogers, and J. E. Day & Co. — bid $1,300 less than the next lowest and about half as much as the highest bidder.

The directors, in justice to those they represent, could do no less than accept the bid.

The contractors, the same parties that built the "State Normal School" at Oshkosh, expect to have the first floor complete for occupancy by the Bank on the first of August, although the contract doesn't call for its completion until the 15th of that month.

The contractors intend to employ Appleton mechanics wherever possible.

Buckley Discounts Rumors Nixon Won't Run in 1972

BY WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR.

LOS ANGELES — Traveling about, you run into an extraordinary number of people who believe that Richard Nixon will not run for reelection. No doubt they think this because of the great precedent set by Lyndon Johnson (although Harry Truman did the same thing). But even if you remind them how unusual was the abdication of LBJ, they will tell you that Nixon will go the same way.

They reason that Nixon is above all else a shrewd politician, that early next spring he will know more surely than anyone that the presidential chapter of his life is closing ineluctably; and that therefore he will seek to adjust himself accordingly. He will (they are saying) thereupon announce that he will not run again, so as to devote himself (the script is LBJ's exactly) to presiding over the orderly liquidation of the Vietnam war. That way (they argue) he can present the next President with a pacified world, a dollar that has ceased to shrink in value, and an unemployment figure on the decline. This is good earnest money on the public esteem of one's countrymen, and a bid for high marks from the historians — better by far than to have everything you accomplish washed away in the bitterness of a campaign, and the ignominy of defeat.

Don't Know Nixon

Except that anyone who talks that way knows nothing at all about Richard Nixon. Mr. Nixon, it is commonly accepted, is a driven man. But after all — they remind you — he did not try to take the nomination in 1964: does he not permit his sense of mission to adjust to political reality? Yes he does. But in fact he went as far as he thought he could to get the nomination in 1964, and it was only after the Governors' Conference in Cleveland that he realized that Goldwater could not be stopped.

But the existing situation is black and white. Either he runs for reelection or he does not. There are those, of whom Johnson is an excellent example, who could not stand the prospect of rejection by the voters. Nixon is not the same kind of man. He will be greatly offended, greatly disappointed, if the voters reject him. But the prospect of that hurt, that disappointment, would never cause him to take a position simply because it would spare him the possibility of that hurt; much as a fatalistic bomber pilot would not, if he thought that duty commanded otherwise, avoid a particular target merely because he knew that anti-aircraft fire was heaviest in that area.

Mr. Nixon will run even if his Gallup rating has dropped to 20 per cent. He will run very hard, very emotionally (because he believes that the issues are in part emotional, as indeed they are, having much to do with the place of the human heart in contemporary politics).

It is altogether another question whether he retains his old political knowhow. We are dealing with someone who has never lost a Republican primary. Will it be so in 1972? Will he run as strong as an incumbent President as he did as aspirant? Will he know how to bring alive the issues the voters care most about at this moment? Will he be significantly challenged?

McCloskey Will Run

Congressman Paul McCloskey of California, as everybody knows, intends to challenge Mr. Nixon in New Hampshire, McCarthy-style. Mr. McCloskey is running, in fact, on the single issue of Vietnam, and gives no indication of what he will do if Vietnam is simply not much of an issue by March of 1972. My own guess is that Mr. McCloskey will in that event find another issue to run on, the fever having got him. There is talk in California (it is uninformed talk) that Ronald Reagan will challenge Nixon. It is uninformed because Mr. Reagan knows that you cannot challenge an incumbent Republican President, as a general rule; and as a practical matter, never when the differences between your own and his programs would strike most of the voters as exiguous.

The other conjecture — that Mr. Nixon will ask Mr. Reagan to come along as Vice President — is more interesting. It may be that Mr. Agnew's day will be over; that like Manolete, he will have killed the bull which, however, also will have succeeded in killing him. In that event, Mr. Agnew would not be able to deliver the help in marginal states that Reagan could deliver. Moreover, unlike the men around FDR, Mr. Agnew is the kind of person who would step aside without a thought if he believed that by doing so he would help the national ticket. But he would not step aside in deference to someone less appealing than he to the southern and border states, whose vote is critical. So who else, if not Reagan?

Wisconsin Report

Lipscomb's Idea for 1-House Legislature Is Really Lost Cause

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — State Rep. Mark Lipscomb has been in the news lately in a modest way for his insistence that he should be permitted to retain his Assembly seat and vote at the same time from a seat in the State Senate to which he was elected in April. He has said that his bit of nonsense was contrived to call attention to one of his profound convictions.

He is convinced that Wisconsin should have a legislature consisting of only one house, consisting of members numbering about half of those who have served during most of this century.

By his claim to the right to act in the Senate and the Assembly simultaneously, he believes, he can attract enough attention to persuade the people of Wisconsin to think about his proposition and to conclude that it is worthy. Sincerity may be conceded to the obdurate young man, who evidently is not aware that it is not always a virtue. But the reaction to his little adventure leaves even the mildly sympathetic onlooker with some doubts about his judgment.

A Lost Cause

The one house legislature (or unicameral as the more pretentious of the critics prefer to call it) is one of the great lost causes of Wisconsin politics, if indeed the idea ever had enough interest or support hereabouts to call it "lost."

A perusal of the record over the last 30 or 40 years will find repeated presentations of the one-house proposition, and quick defeats, either through ignoring of the proposition, altogether or by routine rejection in one house or the other preceded by lack of public response to the cause that Lipscomb has persuaded himself is a popular one.

The conclusion of the typical politician and legislator, therefore, that the people have far more worries and more immediate interests than the theoretical or claimed superiority of a legislature of smaller numerical dimensions may be accurate enough.

But nobody who has a substantial acquaintance with the political process can be unaware that there are also affirmative reasons for the failure of the plan, as in the wisdom of the checks and balances idea.

Repeatedly, one house of the Wisconsin Legislature, and perhaps any American legislature, rejects a proposition that has been approved in another. The presumption that one house is adequate includes the presumption that one house does not make mistakes and that speed is a positive virtue in lawmaking, something that cautious and reflective citizens are not likely to endorse. Indeed, there tends to be a correlation between expert familiarity with the legislative process and a desire for more checks and balances, which doubtless explains why some old hands around the Capitol sometimes suggest, only half facetiously, that a tri-cameral legislature may contain desirable protections.

Savings Are Tiny

Lipscomb believes that the people can be persuaded that a smaller one-house legislative branch will mean "huge savings for the taxpayers."

Here is one of the illusions propagated by the once-over-lightly critics of the legislature and the legislative process on all levels.

Even if the Lipscomb magnum opus becomes reality — which is among the least likely of the possibilities of the times — no realist will dare to assume that it will save money. Even in the most romantic estimate of economies, they will be minute as against the enormous costs of the administrative establishment. Indeed if half a dozen Lipscombs expended as much energy scrutinizing the state budget as a whole as the young Milwaukee politician has devoted to his unicameral hobby horse, they would come up with 10 or 20 times as much in potential economies and, conceivably, perceptible gains to constituents in reduced tax liability.

The habitual adjectives for political viewpoints have mostly lost validity. Yet it is puzzling to observe a young politician who wears the label of a liberal Democrat so eagerly attacking the private citizen's only direct accountable agent in a governmental structure so swiftly growing in size, power and cost.

Treasury Raps Banks For Prime Rate Hike

Top Bankers Informed It Isn't Happy About Their Making Living Costlier

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Treasury not only opposed the recent interest rate boost by the nation's banks but last week engaged in face-to-face jawboning unprecedented in the Nixon administration to try preventing more such inflationary moves.

Carefully worked out at the Treasury by Secretary John B. Connally and Under Secretary Charls Walker the use of the jawbone occurred in a secret luncheon with key bankers — including the Chase Manhattan Bank's David Rockefeller, the man most responsible for the latest increase in the prime rate from 5¼ per cent to 5½ per cent. Walker rapped the bankers' knuckles in language considerably stronger than the administration used against construction labor for wage increases or big steel for price boosts.

There was no thought of rolling back the rate to 5¼ per cent. But the attempt was made to show bankers that the Nixon Treasury will not look lightly at another joyride up the interest rate escalator as money begins to get tighter.

Connally Makes Policy

Moreover, the exercise emphasized that Connally at the Treasury is a major policy-maker in the Nixon administration, not overawed by the White House. Tuesday's jawboning came in the face of snarls from the President's Council of Economic Advisers, headed by Dr. Paul McCracken, that the 5½ per cent prime rate was justified and Connally had no business criticizing it.

When Chase Manhattan announced the rate increase April

Evans

Nowak

22, quickly followed by other major banks, Connally immediately said he was "very disappointed" at the unjustified move. Anonymous spokesmen at McCracken's council quickly derided Connally, and most other banks raised rates the next day, Friday, April 23.

Consequently, Connally and Walker decided to underline the Treasury's opposition. The ideal forum came up Tuesday, April 27, with a luncheon meeting at the Mayflower Hotel of the blue-ribbon bankers' committee advising the Treasury on debt financing. Besides Rockefeller, those present included Robert McClellan Surdam, National Bank of Detroit; Nat S. Rogers, First City National Bank of Houston; and A. W. Clausen, Bank of America, San Francisco. Of them, only Clausen had not raised the rate.

With Connally addressing the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Dr. Walker substituted for him. Longtime executive vice president of the American Bankers Association, Walker was on easy terms with bankers and minced no words. Although committee members are pledged to strictest secrecy at their session, we have been able to piece together what happened.

'Very Disturbed'

Walker began by saying he knew the bankers were "wondering what kind of guy" Connally was. Walker's answer: he was so impressed he was staying as under secretary through 1972. Then he got to the point: Connally's public reaction to Chase Manhattan's boost April 23 actually was "muted". When Connally learned of the increase from reading the news ticker, said Walker, the Secretary was "very disturbed".

The Treasury rejected the notion, Walker went on, that the prime rate should fluctuate according to the cost of money to the banks. Instead, it should be based on loan demand. And loan demand clearly had not risen sufficiently to warrant an increase.

Then Walker punched home his haymaker: "At a time when the government is calling on labor unions to settle for less," it was "a great disappointment" the banking community could not show self-discipline.

Rockefeller responded that Chase Manhattan's policy was to be first in both raising and lowering rates. But Houston's Nat Rogers grumbled that Chase Manhattan had dropped the rate too low to 5¼ per cent in the first place. What followed next was an interest rate colloquy between Walker and Rockefeller.

Walker's jawboning added some backbone to the few giant banks resisting the 5½ per cent rate. Besides Bank of America, they include Crocker-Citizens National Bank, San Francisco; Security Pacific National Bank, Los Angeles; and Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York. Significantly, the Crocker-Citizens president is Dr. Leslie C. Peacock, Walker's former student at the University of Texas and his former lieutenant at the American Bankers Association.

Morgan Guaranty, but perhaps not the California banks, probably will have to join the Chase Manhattan parade. Thanks to Treasury jawboning, however, Rockefeller & Co. may think twice next time before climbing another rung on the interest rate ladder to make life more expensive for everybody.

State Farmer Killed In Tractor Accident

GREENWOOD, Wis. (AP) — LeRoy Metcalf, 59, was killed Thursday when pinned between his tractor and a barn wall on his rural Greenwood farm.

Clark County authorities said the tractor luched when Metcalf's foot slipped off a clutch pedal.

County Boards Scheduled for Reapportioning

Deadline Set for Year After Arrival Of Census Figures

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — While the legislature is contemplating its duty in the reapportionment of state districts, county boards are being reminded that they are confronted with the same legal duty with respect to modifying county board supervisory districts This is indicated by 1970 U.S. census data

The state Supreme Court ruled in a test case in the last decade that the "one man, one vote" principle of representation applies to county boards as well

The county board district boundaries as now fixed will be out of date as soon as the final census reports are available to the boards And the law says that redistricting must be achieved no later than one year after the completion of the census reports, extending through the smallest civil subdivisions.

That means that most county boards probably will start testing the relation of their districts to new population data no later than autumn.

When the state court ruled that county board districts must be tested decennially against population statistics, the legislature six years ago set up a classification of counties according to size to make reapportionment more convenient.

It is possible that some reclassification of counties will follow from the census data of 1970 also.

The classification includes counties from 100,000 to 500,000 in population, from 50,000 to 100,000, and under 50,000 with the larger counties allowed correspondingly larger numbers on their boards.

The Institute of Governmental Affairs of the extension division of the University of Wisconsin had anticipated the reapportionment activities of counties with the preparation of a county reapportionment handbook.

The guide to the law history, mathematics and administration of county board districting will be available from the Institute after May 14, according to Richard Stauber of its staff.

Escape Attempt by James Earl Ray Nearly Fatal

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, who pleaded guilty to slaying Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., almost turned his 99-year prison sentence into death when he tried to escape through a prison steam tunnel.

"He would never have survived the heat if he hadn't got out of the tunnel," Warden Robert H. Moore of Brushy Mountain State Prison said Monday after Ray's unsuccessful escape attempt.

Ray was captured in the prison compound as he sought a way over the stone wall of the maximum security prison in the Cumberland Mountains.

He faced a disciplinary board this morning.

Ray was imprisoned after pleading guilty to the sniper slaying of King outside a Memphis motel room on April 4, 1968. Subsequently he has sought and failed to obtain a new trial on grounds his guilty plea was submitted under pressure from his attorney.

Some Burns

"He was in the tunnel for only about 10 minutes," Moore said, "and he had a few burns but they didn't appear to be serious."

Moore said it would have been impossible for Ray to reach the end of the tunnel without being scalded to death in the 400 degree heat. The tunnel, which leads to the prison steam plant outside the prison walls, supplies steam to the mess hall and is in use year round.

Otherwise, it was a well conceived escape attempt, Moore said.

"First, he removed a concrete block in his cell and got out into an air chamber, a ventilating area behind the cellblock. He crawled along the air chamber to the end and sawed one bar and broke another with a crowbar," Moore said.

"He pulled himself through the hole and got out into the prison yard behind the cellblock. Then he went to the steam tunnel which leads to our steam plant about 100 yards outside the prison."

Moore said Ray got help in his escape bid from his cellmate, Roy Morelock, 44, of Greene County.

The warden said Morelock, serving a life term as a habitual criminal, worked as a prison maintenance man and had access to the tools Ray used in the escape attempt—a hacksaw, crowbar, hammer and chisel.

"Morelock had access to such tools as these and he obviously intended to escape with Ray," Moore said. "Our guards caught up the attempt so fast he didn't have time to get out of the cell".

Ray is no stranger to escapes. He was a fugitive from Missouri at the time King was slain.

He escaped April 23, 1967, from the Missouri State Penitentiary, where he was serving 20 years on a car theft charge.

He was not recaptured until arrested in London some two months after King was shot.

New Investigation Pends in Bank Dealings With Penn Central Stock

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Banking Committee says he may start a new investigation of Chase Manhattan Bank's disposal of Penn Central stock shortly before the railroad went into reorganization.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., committee chairman, accused David Rockefeller, board chairman of the New York bank, of "an effort to throw up a smokescreen."

Rockefeller told the committee Monday the bank's trust department had no inside information leading to the sale of 286,600 Penn Central shares held by the bank's trust department in May 1970. Rockefeller said the decision was made on the basis of public information analyzed by the bank's expert on railroad stocks.

New Questions

But Patman said in a statement Rockefeller's testimony raises new questions, especially about a meeting May 21 between David Bevan, chief financial officer of Penn Central, and officials of the First National City Bank and the Chemical Bank. Heavy sales of the stock by Chase Manhattan, Patman said, started the next day.

"What Mr. Rockefeller failed to mention was the fact that Chase was a leading participant with First National City and Chemical Bank in two huge loans to Penn Central and its wholly owned subsidiary, the Pennsylvania Company . . ." Patman said.

"As a major participant in these two loans, Chase had a tremendous incentive and opportunity to know immediately the details of the May 21 meeting between Mr. Bevan and the officials of First National City and Chemical Bank.

"It was the responsibility of the lead banks to pass the extremely vital information furnished them by Penn Central's financial officer to the various participating banks.

"In view of the extremely serious nature of the revelations made in the May 21 meeting, it is inconceivable that Chase was kept in the dark about the session."

The Banking Committee staff issued a report March 28 saying eight banks close to the Penn Central sold big blocks of stock last year before the seriousness of the railroad's financial situation became public knowledge.

Pulitzer Prizes Awarded

bered the pictures for a long time," he recalled.

William A. Caldwell, 64, won the prize for commentary for his daily column on local affairs in the Record of Hackensack, N.J.

Stay Interested

"All you have to do is look around you to find something to write about. And stay interested," he commented by telephone from Martha's Vineyard where he is vacationing. "Indifference is the cruelest thing that could happen to a writer."

Horace G. Davis Jr. of the Gainesville, Fla., Sun won the award for editorial writing for more than 30 editorials in the newspaper's campaign in support of desegregation of Florida schools.

The award for criticism was won by Harold C. Schonberg, 55, senior music critic for the New York Times for the past 10 years.

The trustees of Columbia University awarded the 55th annual Pulitzer prizes on recommendation of an advisory board. They were endowed by the late Joseph Pulitzer, founder of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and publisher of the old New York World, in a bequest to the university. He died in 1911.

$1,000 Awards

Each award is $1,000 except for the meritorious service award, which earns the winning newspaper a gold medal.

Other 1971 Pulitzer awards in the field of arts and letters included:

History—"Roosevelt: The Soldier of Freedom," by James MacGregor Burns, 52. It is the second volume of a political biography of Franklin Delano Roosevelt by the Williams College professor of government.

Biography—"Robert Frost: The Years of Triumph, 1915-1938," by Lawrance R. Thompson, 65, who became Frost's companion and confidant in 1939 with the understanding that his biography would not be published during the poet's lifetime.

Poetry—"The Carrier of Ladders," by William S. Merwin, 43, his seventh volume of poetry.

General Nonfiction—"The Rising Sun," by John Toland, 58, who traveled for 15 months in the Far East doing research on his story of Japan during World War II.

Music—Synchronisms No. 6 for Piano and Electronic Sound," by Mario Davidovsky, 36, composer and lecturer in music at Columbia University. The work, which he described as "straight music, no theatrical show, no throwing eggs on the ceiling or throwing lights around," had its first performance at last summer's Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass.

Newsmen's Rights to Guard Sources to be Reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether newsmen have a constitutional right to refuse to appear before grand juries and to identify confidential news sources.

Three cases were accepted for hearings next term. They involve Earl Caldwell, a New York Times reporter, Paul M. Branzburg of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and Paul Pappas, of WTEV, New Bedford, Mass. All three newsmen declined to testify before grand juries.

Caldwell was called in a West coast investigation of the Black Panther party. Branzburg was summoned for questioning on drugs in Kentucky and Pappas was called in a Black Panther query in Massachusetts.

By taking on the cases the court set the stage for a broad examination of press freedom and of the Justice Department's assertion that newsmen can be required to assist grand juries.

Caldwell was convicted of civil contempt last June in a federal court in San Francisco. The judgment was reversed by the U.S. Circuit Court in the city in November. The appeals court held reporters can refuse to appear unless the government shows a pressing need for their testimony.

Caldwell, a Negro, had written an article for the Times quoting David Hilliard, a Panther leader, as saying "armed struggle" was the only solution to oppressive government.

The Justice Department in appealing said Cadlwell should be required to testify whether Hilliard spoke seriously or in jest. Also, the appeal said, "from the published articles it appears that he may have other information of a nonconfidential nature which would be of interest to the grand jury."

The circuit court said any testimony by Caldwell could strain his confidential relationship with Black Panthers. Therefore, the court held, even before a newsman could be ordered to appear before a grand jury "the government must respond by demonstrating a compelling need for the witness' presence."

Mixed Dorm Proposal Finds Little Interest

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Wheeling College says it is cancelling plans to integrate male and female students in one dorm due to lack of interest on the part of the male students.

A college spokesman said only 64 men applied to live in the coed dorm. Of those 64, the spokesman said, 32 were weeded out in interviews. About 800 students are enrolled at the Roman Catholic college.

Essential Physicians Deferred

WASHINGTON (AP) — Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr announced Monday authorization of deferments for doctors whose services are essential to their communities.

Tarr said each state must still provide its share of medical personnel in a special draft of doctors to begin in July and continue through January 1972.

The Defense Department has issued a call for the drafting of 1,608 physicians, including 1,531 medical doctors and 77 osteopaths.

Tarr said local boards are being instructed to review immediately the cases of registrants for the doctor draft when they receive information concerning how essential they are to their communities.

The boards are to consider evaluations by existing medical advisory committees available to State Selective Service Systems.

"A physician, dentist or allied specialist may be considered as essential in the community only if he is directly involved in patient care and his removal from the community would result in an extreme shortage of medical personnel to provide adequate patient care," Tarr said.

"Through this modification in our classification proceedings," he said, "we hope to respond to genuine community needs in the health areas."

The change was authorized by Tarr upon the advice of the National Security Council, Selective Service spokesmen said.

Two Teens Die In Fiery Crash

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The deaths of two teen-agers in a fiery Jackson County crash early today sent Wisconsin's 1971 traffic fatality toll to 245, compared to 322 on this date last year.

Alan H. Falk, 17, of Osseo and his passenger Delmar H. Mander Jr., 18, of rural Fairchild were killed today when their car left Interstate 94 four miles east of Osseo. Authorities said the car left the road, struck a post and a guardrail, went through a fence and over a small creek, struck some rocks and flipped over. The two youths were burned to death, when the vehicle burst into flames.

At RCC, Spring Definitely Was the Thing

What does one do in spring? There was no doubt Saturday evening as members of the Riverview Country Club gathered for cocktails, dinner and gaiety amid some of their favorite, and not so favorite preoccupations. at the club's Spring Dinner Dance.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward Zeiss and Mr. and Mrs. John W. Green enjoyed the frivolity of camping. At right, a not so favorite pastime was in evidence as May means spring housecleaning with Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Popelka familiar with this annual event.

Committee members included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bodoh, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Freschl, Mr. and Mrs. R. Barton Hammond. Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Popelka. Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. Zeiss, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B Ziven and chairmen Mr. and Mrs. John W. Green. (Post-Crescent Photos by Robert V. Baeten)

Report on Citizens Conference in Paris

Group Asks for Withdrawal Date to End War

BY CAROL HANSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"Our government's refusal to set a withdrawal date is the main obstacle in peace negotiations." Mrs. E. H. Boettcher said during an informal discussion Monday evening at First United Methodist Church.

One of 171 representatives of a coalition of peace groups (one of five persons from Wisconsin) who met for one week during March in Paris at a Citizens Conference on Ending the War in Indochina Mrs. Boettcher said their main objective in going was to talk with delegates from all groups trying to negotiate peace.

The Citizens Conference was composed of citizens from 41 states. They were young and old, black and white, professionals and non-professionals, she said. Sponsors included the Americans Friends Service Conference and the Friendship of Reconciliation which she said was the oldest of the peace-seeking groups.

These representatives were all persons who had credibility in their own communities for "if we didn't have credibility no one would believe us" when we reported back, she commented.

Because of the number of delegates they met with, the conference members put in very long days in Paris. They talked with representatives of the Provisional Government of the Republic of South Vietnam (formerly the National Liberation Party), the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (Saigon) and the U.S. delegation.

Meetings also were held with newsmen who have been covering the war, with representatives of the National United Front of Cambodia and the Laotian Student Union, as well as with Vietnamese Buddhists and Catholics who are opposed to the war.

She said that the conference members began on the premise that those they were talking with were honest and had integrity. Though everyone involved had to weigh truth from propaganda, Mrs. Boettcher said, "All parties not on our side are just as worthy of belief as those on our side."

According to Mrs. Boettcher, 80 per cent of the Vietnamese people are Buddists who refuse to fight and who, therefore made Vietnamization impossible. When their representatives spoke, all said they wanted to stop the killing, that they want the U.S. to withdraw and to take their war machines with them.

The delegates, she continued, had a most difficult time getting to see the U.S. negotiators. David Bruce would meet with only 12. Since all of the members of the Citizens Conference had gone to Paris to speak with all sides, they were disappointed. Those who did speak with Bruce, however, said he repeated what President Nixon has outlined in his speeches.

Bruce would allow no cameras, no tape recorders and no note taking, she said.

Later, through the efforts of the Citizens Conference coordinator, another meeting was arranged with three deputy U. S. negotiators. They, too, carried the Nixon message.

She said that everyone with the exception of the U. S. and Saigon delegates agreed that a definite date is the only way the killing can be stopped and that only after this date can negotiations be made for the release of prisoners and for setting up free elections.

This was the general content of a telegram sent by the Citizens Conference to President Nixon after the meeting. It was signed by about 150 of the members.

Circles of the King's Daughters

Projects, Plans Bring Heavy Slate

Various circles of The King's Daughters met recently reporting on projects and making plans for continued efforts in the area.

Chalice Circle members brought formals to their recent meeting at the home of Mrs. James Kindschi, 2600 N. Drew St. The party dresses will be delivered to Outagamie County Hospital by Mrs. W. C. St. John, service project chairman, for use by patients at the hospital's annual spring formal dance.

Mrs. Erwin G. Seybold, social chairman, announced that a luncheon for Chalice Circle members is being scheduled for 1 p.m. May 11 at the Hot Fish Shoppe with bridge being played in the afternoon.

Other reports included progress on the Put 'n Take Shop which were given by Mrs. Edward Byrne and Mrs. James Veum. Mrs. Jerome Boettcher, schedule chairman, urged members to volunteer for working hours for the next four months as the shop will maintain regular hours during the summer.

Meals - on-Wheels schedules for the summer were distributed by Mrs. Ronald Veara who reported that 21 members are currently participating in the community project. Mrs. Vincent K. Derscheid will represent Chalice Circle on a committee being formed by the Appleton Business and Professional Women to create a library for the new county jail.

Genevieve Paulson

The Genevieve Paulson Circle of The King's Daughters held its April meeting at the home of Mrs. John Jones with committee members reporting on activities.

A progress report on Meals-on-Wheels was given by Mrs. Gilbert Mueller. Other items on the agenda included an affirmative vote on contributing to the Christ Child Society, providing two additional layettes for the County Welfare Department and the securing of volunteers to staff the blood bank for the coming year.

Committee reports on the circle's luncheon and style show which will be at 1 p.m. May 13 at the First Congregational Church were given. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Gordon Steinberg, ticket chairman, or any circle member. Co-hostesses for April's meeting were Mrs. Robert Rau and Mrs. Maynard Burstein.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Plouff.

Grace Circle

Grace Circle of The King's Daughters are again sponsoring a Young Audiences Concert May 10 for children in grades four and six. The Young Audiences of Wisconsin Inc., will present two concerts by the Milwaukee Brass Quintet under the direction of George Powers. The first concert is scheduled for 1 p.m. at Quinney School, the second at 2 p.m. at Park School.

The Young Audiences' approach is a personal relationship between artist and child, combining music, rapport and the creative imagination of the child, seeking his or her reaction which reflects the impact of this music on the child's mind and spirit.

Other reports included a rummage sale scheduled for May 13 and 14 according to co-chairmen, Mrs. Richard Krause, Mrs. Don Mangold and Mrs. Ken Pawlak. Mrs. Dallas Werner stated that word had been received that Christmas cards sent to Taiwan had been received.

Mrs. David Grunwaldt, Indian chairman, will collect clothing from members of Grace Circle to be sold through the Chalice Circle's Put 'n Take Shop, to finance Indian projects.

April's meeting of the circle was held at the home of Miss Florence Brewster with Mrs. Louis Faust serving as cohostess.

Infant Welfare

The King's Daughters' Infant Welfare Circle which met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Charles Seaborne Jr., included reports affirming involvement in the Girl Scouts for Camperships, the Community Day Care Center and Oneida Heights for which furniture will be provided residents through proceeds from the 1970 Charity Ball.

It was also noted that the rummage sale was a financial success and funds will be used for the Dental Cline sponsored by the Infant Welfare Circle.

The May 25 meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. William Frawley.

Marriage Bears Up Under House-Buying

BY ERMA BOMBECK

We just bought a new house in three days.

Unless your marriage was made in heaven, I do not recommend it. We have always adhered to a theory that the union of two people was never meant to withstand the punishment of (1) hanging wallpaper together; (2) pruning shrubbery side by side; (3) working as a team on the checkbook; (4) sharing an electric blanket with a single control; (5) spending three rainy days in a camper or (6) planning children 10½ months apart.

We have just added to this list (7) buying a house. Being extremely efficient, my husband kept a notebook of the dozen or so houses we viewed and at the end of the day in our hotel room, we would go over the day's crop.

"The one with the woman cleaning the pool was well built." said my husband.

"The house?"

"No, the woman."

"Personally," I said, "I like the house with the meatloaf in the oven. There's something about onions. . ."

"Was that the one where the owner kept following us around and pointing, 'This is the bathroom.' ?"

"Yes, and you were rude to keep shouting 'Right!' I loved the decorator's house, but it was too small. How old is Junior now?"

"Forget it. He's only 12, and isn't even engaged."

"I like the one with the basketball hoop," said a voice.

"Who's he?" I asked tiredly.

"Our 12-year-old," said my husband.

"We've got to start narrowing it down." I sighed.

"Okay, I vote for the house on that deserted dirt road," he grinned.

My eyes flashed. "You won't be happy until I have to organize a garbage can car pool, will you? Why don't we get that long ranch house from that adorable woman who had my book on her bookshelf?"

"Our furniture wouldn't fit into that house."

"Since when does Early Poverty fit any house?" I snarled. "Did the house with the vicious dog do anything for you?"

"I couldn't see much from the car with the windows rolled up," he said. "Besides, I'm thinking maybe we better give up buying and look for a rental."

"That tears it," I snarled. "We look at 31 houses in three days, count bathrooms, check out plumbing, interrupt dinners, make pages of notes and then you suggest renting. That's what you can expect, I guess, from a man whose mother wore a navy blue dress to our wedding."

"Well, what do you want?" he asked.

"I want to be an ex-nun and have my own apartment," I said slamming the door.

THE ACES

World Champions

ON BRIDGE

IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Bruce Gordon began his Broadway career in Brock Pemberton's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." After many other Broadway hits, he chalked up over 400 television appearances. Perhaps he is best remembered as the gangster leader, Frank Nitti, on "The Untouchables."

During a recent visit to Dallas, during which he co-starred with Marie Wilson in "Born Yesterday," Gordon agreed to play a couple of hands with The Aces. He showed us that his qualifications as a leading man were not limited to the stage and television.

Witness his play of today's slam hand when Gordon held the South cards.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass

Opening lead: King of diamonds

Gordon's bid of six spades may appear impulsive; however, there was no clear way to determine North's spade holding. While a jump to five spades may have been interpreted as asking about trumps, Gordon skirted any misunderstanding and gambled. Fortunately, North's trumps were entirely adequate.

West opened the king of diamonds which Gordon ruffed. Normal play is to take the losing trump finesse and then ruff two diamonds, attempting to establish dummy's queen. After both of these maneuvers fail, the heart finesse is taken as a last resort. Not a bad line of play, but not good enough, as the lie of the cards sends the slam down to defeat.

Gordon found a superior line of play to land the slam. After ruffing West's diamond king, Gordon led a spade to dummy's ace.

When the king failed to appear, Gordon ruffed one of dummy's low diamonds. The jack of clubs was overtaken by dummy's queen and another diamond ruffed.

When the diamond ace failed to appear, Gordon played his ace and king of clubs, discarding dummy's last diamond.

The stage was set with all minor suit cards eliminated from delcarer's hand and dummy. When Gordon surrendered a trick to the trump king, East was saddled with the lead and was forced to provide the 12th trick. If he led a diamond, it would yield a ruff and discard; the lead of a heart would ride to dummy's king-jack.

Gordon played the hand exceptionally well. He combined four chances any of which would land the contract A singleton king of trumps, the fall of the diamond ace in three rounds, the possibility of forcing the defender with the king of trumps to yield a trick. Or, lacking any of these, Gordon could still fall back on the straight heart finesse A well-planned hand.

Your Problems

Ann's Eyes Opened by Response to Letter

BY ANN LANDERS

Dear Readers: Remember the letter from the San Mateo wife who marked a calendar so she could keep count of how many times her husband made love to her? The response to that letter was an eye-opener. I had no idea thousands of other wives were also keeping calendars. These women have convinced me that I was too hard on the gal who wrote. Here are excerpts from the mail which proves once more that everybody knows better than anybody.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been married eight years and I don't even write to my own mother, but your insensitive answer to the San Mateo wife made my blood boil. This is my second marriage. My first husband came home for lunch every day and didn't even eat. I thought I'd lose my mind. My present husband said to me after our third child was born, "Now I hope you will stop bothering me for sex." So, I have known both extremes and I can tell you too much is better than too little — Feast of Famine in La Porte

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I sympathize with San Mateo. I have the same problem, only I don't need to keep a calendar. I know the count — my birthday, his birthday, Christmas and the Fourth of July. When I told my husband his low sex drive was not normal for a man of 30 and suggested he see a doctor, he said, "I'm just fine. You should see a doctor." Your column was pinned to my pillow last night. Thanks for nothing — Hungry in Hartford.

DEAR ANN: Your advice to San Mateo stank. Did it ever occur to you that the poor woman did make several passes at her husband and was turned down? Do you realize what this can do to a female's ego? Four years ago, after a spell of seven months with no loving, I decided to vamp my cold fish into submission. I bought a $25 nightgown, a bottle of Joy cologne and had my hair done. Do you know what he said? "Stop pestering me or I'll belt you one." My husband is 27 — not 77. So don't tell me I need counseling. — Cold Bed in Columbus

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your suggestion that a wife be the aggressive one if her husband is not the type does not work for all men. I was married to a man who told me point-blank not to ask him — that when he wanted me, he'd let me know. After waiting one solid year for him to "let me know" I became disgusted and I let his lawyer know. Today I am happily married to a man whose sex appetite matches mine and I am divinely happy. — Atlanta

---

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You conveniently overlooked several possibilies which might explain why a man in his 20's is starving his wife sexually. I know what I'm talking about because my first husband was bisexual, my second husband was impotent and my third husband was too tired for me but had plenty of energy for every waitress in town. How can you be so dumb, Ann Landers? — Olivia of Battle Creek

---

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You really blew it. Why didn't you tell San Mateo to check out her husband's male relatives. Dead batteries run in families, you know. My husban has three brothers — all married. We wives are good friends — perhaps because misery loves company. All of us are hungry for love. One day I decided to ask my mother-in-law if she could account for "the problem." Her answer spoke volumes. She said, "The boys inherited if from their father. We've been married 43 years and if you want to know what our love life was like — just count the kids." — Enlightened but Still Starving.

So thanks to all who wrote to tell me I was wrong. I have concluded that both parties should get counseling.

Give in or lose him ... when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the super sex salesman, check Ann Landers Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Folding Spoon

One interesting change occurred in the spoon around 1400, when the folding spoon appeared. It was a convenience for the day that had as a strict rule of etiquette a bring-your-own policy regarding eating utensils. Even the wealthy, royalty excepting did not have enough silverware to provide a spoon for individual dining guests. As spoons were the only implements, besides fingers, used in dining before the 15th century, every guest simply pocketed his folding spoon before setting out to keep his dinner engagement.

Calumet Zoning Panel Grants Building Permit

SHERWOOD — The Calumet County Zoning Board of Adjustments granted permission to Patrick M. Lemmers to build on lot 9 in the first addition of Dorn's Winnebago Plat at Faro Springs.

The petitioner requested a lot size variance in the shoreland floodplain jurisdictional area, rrom 100 feet lot width, and 20,000 square foot lot area, to 74 feet lot width and 17,760 square foot lot area.

County Planner Roland Tonn at the hearing Saturday said he had checked and found that the lot met the 20,000 square foot area, and although the width was 74 feet, rather than 100 feet, a provision was made to allow building on sub-standard lots, as long as certain requirements were met.

This parcel has an adequate septic tank system and drainfield, according to Anthony Siedel, Sherwood, an authorized septic tank installer.

Lemmers said the small bunk house and mobile home will be removed from the property and will be replaced with a year-round home. He said the owners of adjoining property had no objections to his plans.

Another hearing scheduled Saturday was not held. It concerned a petition of David C. Twesme regarding a side yard variance from 30 feet to 20 feet on lot 24 in High Cliff Recreational Village. Twesme said he wished to cancel the petition because he is considering a plan more attractive than that originally submitted.

Members of the zoning board are Roy Wenzel, Potter; Royal Gillis, Town of Harrison; and James Weber, Town of New Holstein.

Students Plan Peace Rally At Oshkosh

Jackson, Kent State Dead to be Honored At All-Night Vigil

OSHKOSH — The Oshkosh Student Mobilization Committee to End the War in Southeast Asia is sponsoring a rally and all-night vigil Wednesday to commemorate the anniversary of the deaths of the Kent State and Jackson State students and those who have died in the war.

John Pietri, an SMC leader at Oshkosh State University, said during a press conference Monday that the moratorium Wednesday on business-as-usual is not being called a student strike.

He said, "We are offering students an alternative to attending classes and anyone else an alternative to business-as-usual." It is a student's right not to attend classes if he wishes, Pietri said.

The rally will be at noon on the Dempsey Hall lawn, with national speakers hopefully drawing a larger crowd than turned out for the recent peace march in Oshkosh, Pietri said.

Debby Moreland of the Kent State Legal Defense Fund, and Keil Neilson of the National Student Mobilization Committee are scheduled for the rally.

Other speakers include Richard Eiden of the Retail Clerk's Union, Gordon Loehr of the Amalgamated Meat and Butcher Workman's Union, American Local No. 73.

Willie Mitchell of the OSU Afro-American Society, Pietri, and others will address the rally.

Pietri said that last year, "since the invasion into Cambodia and the murders at Kent and Jackson States, the silent majority has shown that it is — 'fictitious'." Labor has actively participated and supported many antiwar demonstrations, he said.

The vigil, which was approved by the OSU administration, will begin after a rock concert Wednesday night. The concert is sponsored by the Students for Unity and nonviolence, and all proceeds will go to the Oshkosh Peace Action Coalition, a number of organizations which have united their support to end the war.

The vigil will be silent. There will be no music and no speakers, Pietri said. "When I think of a vigil, I think of something silent, when you sit and think about what you're doing and why."

Jan Holzmann, representative of a committee formed by student governments in Fond du Lac said a rally is planned for Wednesday at Taylor Park in that city.

Many of the speakers who appear at the noon rally at Oshkosh will speak at 3:30 p.m. at Fond du Lac.

Holzmann said Fond du Lac is a small commuter campus and the students often do not get involved.

"At a rally of this type, we hope to get a sizable turnout of students who make a decision on their own and know where they stand."

The state university campus student government and those from Marion College and area high schools have provided funds to get speakers.

A rock group will play at the Fond du Lac rally.

Michael Cullen, a member of the "Milwaukee 14," convicted of burning Selective Service records, will speak at Marion College at 8 p.m. today.

Both speakers have been associated with the organization for some time and will relate some of their experiences, both humorous and tragic, dealing with the needs of their fellow man.

Nelson, director of development, Green Bay Packaging Inc., who helped originate and shape a recent Wisconsin paper industry survey on the impact of State Department of Natural Resources orders, including past and potential plant closings and loss of jobs. This will be the first complete public disclosure of the results of this survey.

Bicycle Licenses to Be Sold Saturday at Electa Quinney School

KAUKAUNA — Bicycle registration for students attending Electra Quinney and St. Aloysius schools will be from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday on the Quinney School playground, according to Police Chief William Nagel.

Members of the Jaycees and Kiwanis Club again will be on hand to inspect bikes for safety features and to assist with issuing plates. This will be the final school registration effort. Plans call for licenses to be issued at the police station on May 15 for students who failed to pick up licenses at their respective schools.

Beginning May 17, licenses will be available over the counter at the police station for those purchasing bikes after regular license issuing dates.

Woehler helped draw up the proclamation for which Mrs. Marvin Dalke, Seymour, Family Life chairman, laid the groundwork.

Russ Lukow, county agent, encouraged the women to keep up-to-date on rural development revenue sharing and the merger of the University of Wisconsin and the State University systems. He stated that the outcome of these proposals would mean much in the types and kinds of programs that would be made available.

The Jeanette Fenske Memorial Scholarship of $150 went to Miss Cheryl Carter of Shiocton High School. Runner-up was Miss Cynthia Wehrman, Seymour High School who was awarded a $50 U. S. The Ailing House

Wood's Grain Can Show

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Q: I bought some nice-looking unfinished furniture, four chairs and a coffee table, which I would like to finish to look like early American. They are to go in a corner of a remodeled stable. Is it possible to paint them dark red, yet still allow the grain to show through? — Baltimore.

A: Yes indeed, just thin your red paint. Experiment with the amount on the underside of the seats and table top. When you get the right amount of thinner, go ahead.

Q: The floor of our new home's shower is glazed tile and it seems a little too slippery. Is there any treatment to overcome this, such as roughening the tile surface? How is this done? — Milwaukee.

A: Why go to all that trouble? Get a nice rubber mat to be put down when you use the shower and taken up afterward. (Leaving it down will produce a very tough stain to remove.) Or stick on a few strips of the non-skid tape made for this purpose, now widely used in hotels and motels. It's made in many widths, and has its own adhesive. The tape is found in hardware and housewares sections.

Q: The sloping galvanized roof of my small tool and utility shed won't hold paint. It always peels off. What can I do to make it stick? — Norfolk.

A: Get all the paint off and clean thoroughly. Then put on a special rust-inhibiting metal primer made for galvanized (Galvinoleum, made by Rustoleum Co.), followed by any top quality house paint. That'll do it.

Q: How can I take some of the high shine off a lacquer finish? — Milwaukee.

A: Sprinkle a little powdered rottenstone, then lightly rub it with a felt pad dampened with linseed oil. Use straight strokes, no more than eight or ten in any one place, and minimum pressure.

Self-Analysis

State GOP Takes Close Look at Its Image, Aims

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The Republican state organization is collecting returns of what may be the most extensive and candid poll of the attitudes and convictions of the Republican campaign loyalists that has ever been attempted.

The thousands of Republican local organization members who regularly receive the state party committee's headquarters newsletter have been asked by the state committee leadership to reply to the questionnaire designed to aid the task force recently named by Chairman John Hough of Janesville to enable "the party to look at itself."

One of the major purposes, Hough has said, is to determine the contemporary attitude of Republican activists toward traditional organization practices and policies, among the most important of which is the existing rule of the voluntary party that provides for delegate convention endorsement of candidates for party nominations before that primary elections.

Evidently in order to bring out a maximum range of possible views on questions of candidate recruitment, the party workers are also asked to indicate whether they prefer a closed primary, which would mean that only registered members of parties could vote in party primaries, or the open primary, which means the law traditionally applied in this state that authorizes a voter to choose any party ballot in a primary without regard to his previous political behavior.

Party workers also are asked to indicate their views on the most effective methods of candidates promotion and voter solicitation, fund raising, and the presentation of issues.

Deep in the long list of questions is:

"Have you ever gotten anybody under 30 (years of age) to join the Republican party?"

High Priority

(Hough and other GOP chiefs have said that one of the high priority efforts of the party will be to enlist more young persons paying dues, evidently in reaction to the movement for a lowering of the voting age which now appears likely to be enacted here as elsewhere in the nation.)

The Hough program of self-examination also is attempting to measure the face-to-face proselyting work of GOP workers, by asking about the frequency with which typical voters have been called upon by party organization vote solicitors, fund gatherers, and others.

Another question, at a time when the party must be prepared to recruit new candidates for top offices in forthcoming elections, asks for comments on the most effective attributes of a successful candidate, whether experience, personality, speaking ability, or partisan identity.

Some of the questions may be intended to disarm the respondents and to persuade them to reply candidly, for they appear to relate to self-evident problems of any political party. But they evidently were planned to lead into replies on others of more vital consequence, such as worker analysis of the reasons for the party's defeats for the legislature and the governorship last fall.

All But Green Bay Complex

UW Lax in Collecting Tuition

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Students in the Green Bay complex of the University of Wisconsin are the only ones required to toe the line, without exception, in paying tuition and fees, according to a report released recently by the Legislative Audit Bureau.

The bureau that conducts financial and operational checks on the conduct of business in state agencies to assure that business is done in a "legal and proper" manner reported that there is need for considerable improvement, particularly in the collection of fees on all the campuss of the UW except at Green Bay.

Student fees and tuition are normally paid in a lump sum before classes start each semester. Students registering after the beginning of classes are expected to pay late registration fees in addition to tuition. According to a ruling by the UW Board of Regents "In hardship cases, chancellors may defer payment of part of a student's fees up to the midpoint of the session." Students withdrawing from classes or school may receive a portion of their tuition as a rebate, up to the fourth week of a semester.

The audit of bursar's office operations on the university's four campuses during the past year found that contrary to operating rules:

—Students who dropped out of school on the Madison campus were treated "as if they never registered. No fees were assessed or records marked.

—Ten per cent of the Milwaukee campus students during the second semester of the 1969-1970 school year paid tuition late, but were not charged a penalty fee.

—The Milwaukee campus bursar's office did not send notices to students owing fees until the end of the semester, rather than after the fourth week, and students were permitted to complete the semester and receive grades even when they had not paid.

—On the Parkside campus 21 students who owed fees from previous years were permitted to register last fall, and 10 students who had not paid were permitted to complete a 1969-1970 semester and receive grades.

—Accounts receivable, or unpaid student fees, library fines, parking fines and student loans, amounted to more than $50,000 on the Parkside campus last January, $7,304 of which were debts that dated back before the 1969-1970 school year.

In contrast to the laxness on the other campuses, the audit bureau found that there is "excellent cooperation between the registrar and bursar in insuring that all students have either paid or have a bona fide accounts receivable by the end of the fourth week of class," on the Green Bay campus.

The failure to charge students who drop out at Madison, the auditor stated is inconsistent with policy, and unfair to students who receive only partial refunds on withdrawal from courses.

Lucey Calls for County Government Streamlining

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey called Monday for increased streamlining of county governments in Wisconsin as a way counties can meet their increased role in the lives of the citizenry.

County government "must be able to respond more efficiently and effectively to the growing list of problems and functions it is asked to tackle," Lucey said in remarks for a conference on county leadership.

The governor cited pending legislation to give counties greater flexibility in their operations and an increase in the number of full-time administrators in county government as two ways counties would be able to improve their problem-solving posture.

Lucey said counties today are topheavy with elected officials. "At present, the average Wisconsin county as 280 elected officials, while the national average is 163," Lucey said. "Twenty-eight of the state's 72 counties have more than 280 elected officials. Obviously, effective and timely decision making is difficult under these circumstances."

County Chiefs Press Property Tax Relief

Lucey Also Hears Plea for Home Rule

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — Wisconsin's full-time county government leaders told Gov. Patrick Lucey and other state officials here Monday that they want home rule for counties and that they need immediate property tax relief.

The 15 full-time executives, administrators and county board chairmen varied only slightly in relating their problems to the governor and officials of the state Department of Local Affairs and Development at a conference on county leadership.

The conference was sponsored by the State Department in cooperation with the Wisconsin County Boards Association and the Institute of Governmental Affairs at the University of Wisconsin.

Outagamie County Executive Alvin Woehler was one of the county leaders calling for home rule. He said the legislature must be responsive to the counties' request and soon. "The priority item is to have the state as responsive in actions as it is with the mouth." Woehler said, charging the state with unkept promises of aid to the counties.

Fail to Use

Lucey, who spoke at a noon luncheon, agreed that there is need for more home rule, but suggested that there is legislation in many areas which the counties are failing to use.

In response to a question on housing, Lucey said it may be necessary to have a statewide uniform housing code to help the housing industry. "This is one industry which has suffered not from bigness but from smallness," Lucey said. He indicated that the variety of housing codes and standards throughout the state has made it impossible to have large-scale housing construction.

The governor also defended his budget against charges of penalizing counties in the field of mental hospital aids. His plan calls for reducing mental hospital aids from 60 per cent to 50 per cent while increasing aids for mental health outpatient clinics from 40 per cent to 50 per cent.

Some county leaders have said this will cost their counties in excess of $250,000 a year in state aids.

Tremendous Cost

Lucey said studies have shown the cost is tremendous for inpatient treatment while many more patients can be treated for less money through outpatient clinics. The proposed aid change, he said, is to encourage counties to use mental health clinics. He also said that if counties establish comprehensive mental health boards they would qualify for an additional 5 per cent in aid for both hospitals and clinics.

Woehler challenged Lucey on the $1,200 per month per capita cost of some of the state colonies. The governor agreed that the costs were high and said the colonies were not being spared from the state's austerity program. He said he would not reduce treatment standards to cut the cost.

The governor told the county leaders he was looking to them for guidance in developing legislation and programs to support county government.

During a round table discussion, Woehler agreed with Milwaukee County Executive John Doyne that assistance programs such as blind aid, disabled aid and old age assistance should be taken out of county welfare programs and put under Social Security to reduce the financial load on property tax.

Pain of Change Can be Eased

MADISON — The transition from a decentralized authority to a single head of government can be painful, but that pain can be minimized, Wisconsin's full-time county government leaders were told here Monday.

A county administrator from New Jersey and a county executive from New York told Wisconsin county executives, administrators and board chairmen how they handled the transition problem in their counties.

The discussion was during a conference on county leadership sponsored by the State Department of Local Affairs and Development in cooperation with the Wisconsin County Boards Association and the Institute of Governmental Affairs at the University of Wisconsin.

Alastair McArthur, deputy director of the National Association of Counties, related what he termed were the "seven pressure points of transition" which an administrator or executive must face.

The seven areas are the executives' relationship with the county board, the elected department heads, the appointed department heads, the heads of other local units of government in the county, the news media, the local state representatives and the citizens.

Budget is Key

Both Harry Daniels, elected executive of Oneida County, New York, and Guy Millard, appointed administrator of Somerset County, New Jersey, agreed that the key to their relationships with the county boards and other county officials is the budget.

The budget, Daniels said, "is the most important document we have." He said it is the one means the executive has of knowing exactly what is happening in the county and how he can control it.

Daniels said that his predecessor, who was the first

New Image for UW Student Leadership

BY CAROLYN STEWART
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Beginning with the locks on the doors to the Wisconsin Student Association offices in the Memorial Union here, Tim Higgins, the new WSA president, plans to effect some changes in student government on the University of Wisconsin campus.

The Appleton Xavier High School graduate, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Higgins, 1608 Hillcrest Drive, Appleton, was swept into office over the present WSA vice-president Andy Himes as his Surge party won a majority of the available seats on the student senate and accomplished a victory over the present student leaders who, by their own descriptions, are radical.

Higgins was anxious that the locks on the doors be changed, the books be audited and the new senate be seated as soon as possible so the takeover would be complete. But, the pleasant-looking, neatly dressed junior was reluctant to label himself a "moderate" as others have attempted to do to distinguish his brand of student politics from those that have made Wisconsin residents cringe over the state of affairs on the Madison campus.

Two to One Margin

The new student leader, who won two to one with only 13 per cent of the students voting, described his view of the role of student government as an activist coalition of student organizations on campus. In contrast to the old leadership that he said, "did little to organize the community around issues of concern to it," Higgins said his administration would attempt to serve student needs.

Few students have been involved in student government, he said, because of "the lousy reputation of WSA." The old administration "never brought new people into the antiwar movement or concerned itself with racism or sexism on the campus," all of which Surge plans to do.

While the proportion of students voting in the WSA election last week was characteristically small, it did represent an increase over the number of ballots cast a year ago, Higgins said. But, rather than take the credit for the improved turnout, the new president said he believes that "many cast their votes by not voting because they think WSA doesn't amount to anything."

Association Potential

The student association, however, has the potential to amount to a significant part of the student's life, Higgins believes, because it has resources and facilities that can be used to aid the students. The major impact it can have on student life is economic, and he hopes it will make enough difference to cause students to have an interest in the association.

Neenah Boy Drowns in Stone Quarry

Friend Unable to Pull Gregory Schudy From Center of Pond

NEENAH — Gregory Schudy, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Schudy, 218 N. Lake St., drowned about 6:30 p.m. Monday after trying to swim across an abandoned stone quarry.

According to Winnebago County Coroner Duane Moore, the boy, his brother and two companions were trying to catch frogs at the quarry when Gregory decided to take a swim before going home.

Moore said the boy got about halfway across the quarry when he shouted to his companions for help because he had a cramp.

One of the friends, also 11, jumped in and swam out to him, but was unable to pull the boy to shore.

Menasha Police Department skin divers were called out to start searching for the boy and he was found after about one and one-half hours in about 20 feet of water.

Funeral arrangements are pending at the Taylor Funeral Home in Wisconsin Rapids.

Survivors include the parents, an older sister and two younger brothers.

Hunger March to Be Held Saturday

As part of International Walk Day, Appleton area youths have their own "freedom from hunger" walk. It will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday.

The young people are part of a group known as Young World Development, a branch of the American Freedom From Hunger Foundation.

The walk will begin at Goodland Field, continue to Kimberly, Combined Locks, Kaukauna, Little Chute and back to Goodland Field in Appleton. Registration starts at 7 a.m.

Checkpoints have been set up at Telulah Park; St. Paul Church, Combined Locks; St. Mary Church, Kaukauna; Riverside Park, Kaukauna; St. John Church, Little Chute; Verbaaten's and St. Thomas More, Church, St. Pius Church, Wilson Junior High and Goodland Field in Appleton.

Walk Cards

Persons interested in taking part in the walk may pick up walk cards at the Jeanery in Appleton.

Each walker is responsible for obtaining a sponsor, or as many sponsors as he can, who will agree to pay a certain amount of money for each mile walked.

After the walk, the youths receive certificates for the number of miles they have walked. These are to be presented to the sponsors who then will contribute money.

The organization has asked that sponsors make checks payable to Freedom From Hunger Foundation, rather than the individual.

Sponsors are needed for the walkers and any business or person interested in sponsoring a youth may contact the Appleton State Bank, which is handling the money for the walk.

Also needed are nurses who would volunteer their free time Saturday to name the checkpoints. The young people are checking businesses this week to seek sponsors and to ask for donations of food, beverages and some medical supplies.

The money will be divided in the following way: 42.5 per cent will go to a foreign project, 42.5 per cent for a local program and 15 per cent to the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation for the support and extension of the Young World Development.

The Appleton walk is sponsoring two domestic projects — in Menominee and Oneida counties.

The Thunderbird Ranch in Menominee County, for teen-age Indian boys with emotional problems, will receive a part of the money. It serves as a substitute for a penitentiary.

A summer school for Indian grade school children, conducted at Sacred Heart Seminary, Oneida, will get the rest of the domestic funds.

International funds will go to the American Friends Service Committee working in South Vietnam. The Quaker group offers aid to civilians affected by the war. The program includes a rehabilitation center for amputees, a child day care center for orphans and refugees and a training program for natives in medical professiosn.

The Rev. James Nelson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, Appleton, put his feet where his preaching was when he walked 30 miles and collected $60 for the Freedom From Hunger Foundation's "Walk for Development." He was the first walker for the program, which is staging a similar hike Saturday to collect money for the poor and needy. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Finance Committee Puzzles Over City Reapportionment

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

What's being done about reapportioning Appleton ward boundaries?

The City Council's finance committee couldn't think of anything Monday, and Finance Director David Champion agreed to do some research.

According to the Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote principle, the city must change ward lines to equalize population between wards.

It is known that some wards have far outpaced others in population growth since the last redistricting. Annexations and residential construction have expanded the wards on the city's southeast and north sides in particular.

And the subject is timely now that 1970 federal census figures are becoming available.

At one time city officials discussed having the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) analyze population figures and recommend new ward boundaries, to avoid the political friction that could result if aldermen draw their own borders.

Attempts to find records of formal action requesting a COG study have been fruitless, however.

Committeemen wondered Monday whether COG would do such a study except on a special contract basis, with the city paying the cost.

A COG spokesman said today the regioanl planning agency would be capable of performing the study, but he also was unable to find records of a formal request from the city.

He added that it is expected to be a few months before the block-by-block census data that would be needed for the study will be available.

As for the cost, he said he was unable to say whether the service could be performed as part of regular services to whether a special contract including a fee arrangement would be needed. A determining factor is the size of a project, and whether it would significantly reduce staff time for other projects, he explained.

Ald. Walter Kalata (2nd), present as a spectator, reminded committeemen that he had sought a recommendation on a related issue, the possible merging of aldermen's and county supervisors' jobs within the city.

The Citizens Advisory Committee was to have filed a recommendation by May 1, but failed to meet. The council rewarded the committee by declining to renew it for another year's term starting last month.

While ideally city officials would like to see ward boundary lines coincide with the borders of county supervisory districts, the county board has been considering a possible reduction in the size of the board.

Fewer supervisors would mean larger districts and probably make it impossible to make wards and supervisory districts identical, unless the council also reduced its size — a move which at this point appears highly unlikely.

The COG spokesman also

Family Homeless

An east side family was left homeless this morning when fire swept through their home doing extensive damage. Fire officials said the cause of the fire is undetermined.

Fire fighters fought the blaze at the home occupied by Mrs. Cindy Schabow, 615 E. Pacific St., for about 20 minutes before bringing it under control. They were at the scene for about 1½ hours.

No one was reportedly at home at the time, and no injuries were reported.

Fire officials said the fire apparently started in a hallway closet. Further investigation into the cause of the blaze is being done. Authorities said the home a small, 1½-story structure, probably will not be able to be occupied again.

Officials said Mrs. Schabow, reportedly separated from her husband, was working when the fire broke out. Four of her six children were in school. The other two were located at a neighbor's house early this afternoon.

The blaze broke out about 10:30 a.m.

Police Building Called Appalling

BY PETER BACH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Conditions at the Appleton police station were described as appalling Monday afternoon by a member of a citizens group investigating the possibilities of relocating the department.

Donald Stone, manager of the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce, termed Monday's gathering of concerned citizens a "vehicle to get headed in one direction" on the question surrounding the existing conditions.

Appleton police, in the face of a city proposal to have a feasibility study conducted on the Appleton Vocational School to transform it into a police station, have expressed instead the need for an all-new facility.

Ald. Robert Roemer, chairman of the City Council's Public Safety Committee which recommended the study of the school, said no one yet knows if the school "could be functional" as a police station.

Architects have until May 15 to apply for doing the study, he explained. From the date the council hires one of them to perform the study, he said, the results should be known in six months. If the council decides the building is not suitable for renovation as police headquarters, Roemer said, "we'll need to look for a new site. Nobody has been pushing (the possibility of new quarters) too much," he admitted.

Needed as Draw

Dr. Neil Brahe, an Appleton dentist who has formed a committee called the Citizens Police Reserve, replied that for years, Appleton police have "ended up with nothing. We need a top drawer facility to attract top drawer men," he commented.

Brahe, terming present conditions "appalling," said it is "about time we give our policemen something decent, to roll the crime rate back." Merely renovating still another old building is "throwing good money after bad," he said.

Police Chief Earl Wolff, said he was "quite sure of the council was sincere" in March of 1969 when police were moved to what were called temporary quarters at 300 N. Appleton St., to make way for the new Gimbels store. From 1950 to 1968, police had been based in a building at Washington and Morrison Streets that was not originally a police station.

Wolff commented that when the move was made in 1969, it was a "foregone conclusion" that a joint city-county safety building would be built to alleviate the difficulty of inadequate police facilities. An effort in that direction failed late last year.

No Standards

Wolff, replying to a question from League of Women Voters representative Barbara Hoffman, said no objective standards have ever been set for the construction requirement of a police station.

He added, however, that experience has shown a police station should be "located in the perimeter of the business district," a requirement met by the school at 105 E. Kimball St. Officers should also have access to "arterial streets to move emergency vehicles," he commented.

V. I. Minahan, publisher of The Post-Crescent, asked whether traffic would be congested at the site. Wolff replied that it likely would and suggested that perhaps the council, if it approves a move to the school, should also consider widening roads in the vicinity.

Westphal Seeks New Ideas for Better Education

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

James Westphal, director of academic services, is the idea man, "the dreamer" as his fellow team members call him, in the Appleton public school system's new administrative team.

Westphal said he must really be the inspirational leader who seeks and develops the ideas for new programs and educational innovations from the administrators and teachers of the school system.

He also is responsible for evaluating and recommending improvements in the current educational programs, as well as keeping abreast of the latest developments in education.

The idea portion of his job comes under the heading of research and development, an area which has four years been shortchanged because of growing economic difficulties but which educators believe is critical to a system. It's really short and long range planning, tying practicality and economy with innovation.

Can't Be Ignored

This is an area that industry hasn't neglected — and the board of education decided in January that an organization responsible for 14,000 youngsters and with a $10 million per year budget can't ignore anymore.

Westphal referred to it as the "cutting edge of education." The values of research and development may not show up in a year or two, much less in three or four months, but they should in the long pull.

As the consultant who organized the team approach put it: "Insofar as possible, the (research and development) department should not be involved in day-to-day problem solving. Primary effort should be placed on developing new programs and procedures to increase efficiency of the educational effort and to upgrade the overall quality of the educational program."

James Westphal

Pure Education

Westphal can concentrate on innovation for innovation's sake. While he also is aware of practicalities, he can rely on the directors of operations and administrative services, as well as Dist. Admin. Orlyn Zieman, to be concerned with so-called realities.

Of his department, Westphal said: "We're more deeply concerned with pure education and its effect on kids."

However, no administrator in the Appleton system isn't aware of possibilities, especially financial possibilities, because the district is in a more crippled financial condition than it has ever been. This is due to severe budget cutbacks in recent years by the fiscal control board, the taxing arm of the district.

"We're charged with making a better educational system as economical as it is now or more economic," Westphal said.

While improvements in the existing arrangements are — and probably should be — for education's sake, they also take into account the economics of the change.

Other Responsibilities

Research is only one of three areas of responsibility for Westphal. The other two are pupil services and curriculum, two areas dealing more in current operation and its effectiveness.

The pupils services includes the nurses, psychologists, special education and speech therapists, social workers and other nonclassroom personnel. These

Winnebago Panel Okays Overpass

OSHKOSH — The Winnebago County highway committee today unanimously endorsed the Breezewood Lane railroad overpass and an easterly extension to County Trunk A (South Commercial St.)

Although the committee endorsed the project, methods of financing were not discussed at this time. A special meeting is being planned for Monday when the committee will go over the $800,000 cost and suggest ways of financing with federal, county and local funds.

The project has a high priority as far as the City of Neenah is concerned because it will provide the sole east-west link without railroad track obstructions.

County highway Commissioner Robert Graf noted the state is interested enough in this project to help get it on the FAS (Federal Aid Secondary) system.

$800,000 Cost

According to Graf, the cost of the project is being estimated at $800,000 with $300,000 earmarked for the structure to clear the railroad tracks, $250,000 to bring it back down to grade and another $250,000 to extend the 48-foot concrete pavement east to S. Commercial Street.

The matter of timing is considered important because state highway engineers in Green Bay are finalizing the report to be sent to the state highway commission on the Breezewood interchange. The overpass project, although not a part of the interchange, hopefully can be bid along with the interchange, realizing a substantial cost saving.

Highway committee members, after discussing the real possibility of the overpass project being annexed to the city after construction, decided that the municipality in which the overpass would be located would be irrelevant because it would still serve the entire area.

State 114

They also discussed the possibility of State 114 being rerouted to Breezewood Lane but withheld any request or commitment pending a highway jurisdictional study to be conducted within the next three to four years.

Graf explained that the jurisdictional study might indicate a takeover by a higher municipal level (county or state). But Graf also recommended that any proposal concerning the jurisdiction be withheld until the study was complete.

"Asking for a rerouting for State 114 at this time might cloud the issue of the overpass," Graf said. The committee agreed.

Supv. A. J. Korndor, committee chairman, James Coughlin, and Clarence Loehning, agreed with Graf.

Menasha Favors C-T User Fee Study

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MENASHA — It's not official yet, but Menasha officials look like they prefer paying a lot more money for sewer and incinerator user fee studies by a Chicago engineering firm than have the work done for much less by a local accounting firm.

The finance committee, with strong urging by Mayor James Adams, unanimously approved that route Monday night. The issue comes up for a formal common council vote tonight.

Here are the alternatives:

—Consoer and Townsend, a Chicago engineering firm that is already engaged by the Neenah-Menasha Sewerage Commission to design a $17.2 million plant expansion project, has offered to do a two-stage sewer user fee for both Neenah and Menasha for $36,000. Each city's share would be half of that amount.

The firm has also offered a separate incinerator user fee study, also in two stages, for a total of $19,500.

That means that all of the Consoer and Townsend proposal would cost a total of $55,500. Menasha would pay one-half of that.

—The Neenah accounting firm of Haven, Garlock, Schatz & Otto have proposed a combination sewer-incinerator user fee study for a total of $24,100. Each city would split that cost.

"I still feel Consoer and Townsend should do it," said Adams, despite the much higher cost. He gave several reasons: the engineering firm is designing the plant and would have plans and data available that would take the accounting firm much longer to get their hands on; the engineering firm could do a better job because it's their specialty; having C & T do the studies would assure federal and state authorities who are looking for uniformity in setting up a user fee, something that Adams hopes will aid the local plant in getting federal and state aids for new construction.

Ronald St. Laurent, sewage plant manager, told the finance committee that C & T could develop "a rate schedule that would be well worth looking at" because of the firm's experience in the Neenah-Menasha project and its engineering expertise.

Adams said the C & T study would be "more technical than simple accounting," and when told by finance chairman Herbert Batley that the price was considerably higher than the accounting firm's offer, replied, "The trouble is, they can't do nearly as good a job."

Borrow $14,000

The finance committee recommended authorizing the mayor to borrow up to $14,000 for the first stage of the incineration and sewer user fee studies by C & T. The other $14,000 will have to be committed by Neenah.

The committee also authorized short-term borrowing, if it is ever needed, for the second stages of the two studies.

Neenah met on user fees Monday night, but no action was taken. C & T said it could have the first stage of their study done in 150 days, which doesn't leave much time before the sewage plant user fee goes into operation on Jan. 1, 1972.

Neenah School Will Drop Graded Classes

Education Board Approves New Plan Of Curriculum Panel

NEENAH — Permission has been given to Taft Elementary School staff members to affect a non-graded grouping program during the 1971-72 school year.

The board of education gave its okay Monday night after hearing the recommendations of its curriculum committee, which two weeks ago, had sat through an extensive explanation of the program by the principal and staff members of Taft.

The board also unanimously agreed, in spite of an objection from a Taft parent who said he was "very much opposed to the ungraded system."

Gerald Keyzer, 818 Jean, said he believed this program was "kind of dropped on the parents," and he added that he felt there was parental opposition to it.

Although he asked that the decision on the Taft program be postponed to give parents more time to look at it, the board decided to go ahead and approve it.

John Hovie, principal of Taft, said his door is always open to parents who may have questions about the program. He also pointed out that a committee of nine members (parents) was organized last fall and spent a lot of time going into the program.

The staff has also put its backing behind the non-graded approach, Hovie said. In addition to staff members working the program, the bulk of drawing up the program has been handled by five PROCON (federally funded fellowship) members, who will return as regular staff members at Taft, next fall.

Neenah Must Provide Hot Lunch

NEENAH — The Neenah board of education was told Monday that either it provide the hot lunch school program to all students, or federal aids on the program as it exists now may eventually be in jeopardy.

Last fall the Neenah school district, as other districts, complied with federal legislation by setting up a policy for free and reduced price meals.

James Clark, district business manager, told the board that apparently the second part of the legislation is that all school children in the nation be given an opportunity to purchase a hot lunch.

'Economically Disadvantaged'

The intent, explained Jack Nienmeier, of the State Department of Public Instruction, is to eventually reach all disadvantaged children.

"A tremendous percentage of disadvantaged children are economically disadvantaged," nnienmeier said.

He pointed out that the federal government would come up with about 75 per cent of initial capital expenditures to get the hot lunch program going in the schools.

In Neenah, seven schools do not have the hot lunch program. In the Neenah school district it would mean that the total capital outlay cost would be about $39,000, of which federal funds would pick up $29,000, meaning Neenah would have to raise about $9,700.

In addition to this would be a cost of about $11,400 to the district for delivery and installation.

"It really boils down to dollars and cents," Supt. Donald Scott said, "whether the district wants to subject itself to this additional cost or give up the aid we're now getting in the hot lunch program."

Finance Unit Works For Aircraft Museum

OSHKOSH — The finance subcommittee seeking help for the Experimental Aircraft Association's proposed $225,000 museum at Wittman Field is already operating, said Kenneth Seefeld today.

Seefeld is a member of the EAA Red Carpet citizens' committee and of the county board's aviation committee.

The Red Carpet finance group headed by Richard Koehn, president of the First Wisconsin National Bank of Oshkosh, has the job of raising money to build the museum.

Seefeld, as a member of both it and the county board, has the job of convincing supervisors to give the non-profit museum a 10 to 12-acre parcel of land now owned by the county.

'Unbelievable'

"We'll have some objections," he predicted, "but can answer them logically. Before they vote, we'll take them on a bus to the EAA's museum in Franklin to see what we'll get. It is almost unbelievable."

The parcel is now used for farming and is off the west end of the east-west runway, right in the flight pattern. Seefeld explained that the location made the site unsuited to industry or housing. "There is little else it could be used for."

Locating a 120 by 240-foot building there will be advantageous to the EAA, Oshkosh, Wittman Field, and the public. Last year over 100,000 visited — for free — the association's museum in Franklin to see displays covering the entire history of aviation and many of the planes which made it.

CAB Bureau Recommends Capacity Hike

Decision Would Affect Levels for Air Taxi Travel

The Bureau of Operating Rights of the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) has recommended increased commuter airline capacity levels, warning that to fail to do so could cause a loss in total air travel.

The bureau, referring to opposition raised by Brown County and the Green Bay Area Chamber of Commerce to increasing the maximum weight permitted for airplanes used by air taxi services and commuter airlines, said, "Many potential air travelers will use surface modes of transportation if they are forced to commute to a distant regional airport."

The bureau has recommended that the 12,500-pound gross takeoff weight limitation for commuter airlines be replaced by a 30-passenger seat limitation and a total revenue payload limitation of 7,500 pounds, in line with an Air Wisconsin proposal.

Air Wisconsin is an Appleton-based commuter airline with connection in Wisconsin and neighboring states.

The U. S. Department of Transportation recently filed a brief proposing basically the same limitations.

The Green Bay chamber and Brown County contend that any rule changes which would permit Air Wisconsin to use large airplanes would endanger North Central Airline service at Green Bay and Oshkosh.

They asked the board to prohibit scheduled air taxi service within 50 miles or one hour's drive of a point with certificated service.

The bureau said in a brief, "The apparent implication is that in the interests of protecting certificated carriers, the board should require the public to use less convenient certificated service in lieu of local air taxi service.

"However, in many cases it is doubtful that the proposed restriction would gain substantial traffic for certificated carriers.

CAB has been conducting an investigation to determine whether the present 12,500-pound limitation, which has been in effect since the 1930s, should be raised.

Store on State Street, adjacent to the Memorial Library, the association is able to offer toothpaste, for example, five cents cheaper than other stores, Higgins explained. When students begin to realize the value of such an institution, he predicts, they will be concerned that it stays around and will make sure that people are elected who will continue such services.

It is through the store first that Higgins hopes confidence in the Wisconsin Student Association can be rebuilt, and that, once re-established, will attract more people to it to use its services.

Key Clubs Governor

Talk of service to students and student organizations was not unexpected from the president who, as a high school student was named governor of the Wisconsin-Michigan region of Key Clubs, a group of secondary school service clubs supported in part by the Kiwanis clubs, and who also won the post of governor in Badger Boys State.

But while Higgins discusses the student association as a coalition to provide services to its members, he is not divorced from the political and controversial issues of the day, such as the war, racial and sexual equality and student rights. The difference between the new president and his predecessor appears on first impression to be one more of style and approach than of concerns.

Higgins gives a realist's reading of the campus political situation as he notes that a student president making speeches from the top of the library about the unwillingness of the regents or administration to follow student directives is useless.

Student Voice

"We can talk to the regents all we want to. If the regents don't like it, they're not going to change," he says of student influence on campus policies. But, he also thinks a student voice is needed and says he would like to see three or four students on the board of regents to participate in the change.

As a member of Mace, an honorary student scholarship and leadership society, Higgins has had considerable contact with both the regents and administration. Chancellor Edwin Young of the Madison campus is the Mace adviser and the group recently has met with Bernard Ziegler, president of the regents, and John Weaver, president of the university.

Through those contacts, and his involvement in the formation of Reachout, a student organization whose members travel around the state and make speeches on the university to civic groups, Higgins says he has established a good personal relationship with members of the administration. A good relationship, however, does not mean that the new president expects to be a mouthpiece for policies that are in opposition to student views, Higgins was anxious to make clear.

Different Viewpoints

"They (the administration) have a point of view that is not a student point of view," he said. It can be understood in the context that their point of view is designed to preserve the administration, Higgins said, and it can be communicated to student groups and acommodated, he believes, through the leadership of the student groups themselves.

On his first day in the WSA office — after an acrimonious campaign and election that was plagued by charges of unfair procedures, several appeals to a student court, and now, plans to contest the results by a party barred from the ballot — Higgins was not quite ready to take charge. But, he was ready to look foward to a changeover the student voters apparently have willed.

Pain of Centralizing

executive in Oneida County, established a distinct line between the executive and legislative branches of the county, which has made his job much easier.

He also said that the first year in office required an "abnormal amount of time in a public relations role with holdover department heads and elected officials." He added that his relationship with the leaders of communities was good except with the "flamboyant mayor" of the county's largest city.

Since he has been executive, Daniels said that 99 per cent of his county's legislation originated in his office with no more than seven or eight legislative items starting in the county board.

Oneida County, Daniels said, has about 275,000 people and has a 37-member county board organized much the same as Outagamie County's. The board and its committees each meet only once a month.

Somerset County also has about 275,000 people but is run by five part-time commissioners elected at large.

Millard said that his philosophy is "I want to rock the boat but quietly and privately. The last thing I want the citizens to think is that I am running the county."

He said that one of the best tools a county leader can have to accomplish something is strong support from his state legislative delegation.

Millard admitted that he did not think he could work the way he does if he had a county board the size of those in Wisconsin and New York.

Daniels also said that he did not like a 37-member board. "I would prefer fewer than 12," he said.

Both Daniels and Millard said that working through the department heads was the key to getting things done in the county.

Daniels said that he has the authority to fire any department head without having to go to the county board, but "they have complete authority in their own departments. I never bypass them."

referred to the relationship between city and county reapportionment. He said it would be best if both tasks were done together, but said the planners would need guidelines from both the City Council and county board spelling out the kind of results desired.

In other business Monday, the committee received a report from the finance director who calculated costs of fire department rescue squad service at $423 to $500 per run. Champion said that is based on labor costs of $103,000 and 243 emergency runs last year, but he said the cost of sleeping quarters for the men, equipment purchase and maintenance, garage space and other factors were left out.

He said the department estimated costs at $95 per run.

Ald. Robert Roemer (8th), chairman of the public safety committee which takes up the controversial proposal to buy a new rescue vehicle this afternoon, dismissed Champion's figures as "a lot of nonsense."

"Don't forget flushing the toilets." Roemer told Champion after hearing the other kinds of costs listed

Ald. Glenn Thompson (13th) requested the cost breakdown. Champion said the alderman will receive a written report. Thompson opposed the rescue squad as presently operated, siding with private ambulance operators who say the city is competing with them.

The committee also:

— Heard a lengthy dissertation from Champion advocating a central data processing system for city, county, school, water department and other purposes, tied in with proposals for combining city hall and police headquarters.

If records were processed centrally, Champion said, the same government bodies should consider combined offices as well. Morgan School serves as administrative offices for the school district, but occupies a block of land that might better serve wider purposes, he suggested.

The committee took no action on the motions, which were prompted by Assessor George Schwarzbauer's request for a new address printing machine for four city offices, including his, the clerk's and the treasurer's.

— Agreed to meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday to receive recommendations from Champion and the city's private accountant and act on requests from Fox River Bus Lines, Inc., for payment of subsidies to cover bus line losses for the latter six months of 1970.

— Filed a report from a management service that offered the study the public works or parks and recreation department and show the city how to save money through greater efficiency.

Mayor George Buckley invited the firm to submit the proposal, and a representative appeared before a surprised committee two weeks ago. Roemer moved to file the proposal, adding, "If the mayor wants to bring it in, let him do it."

City Council Sets Meeting On Assessing

Appleton Assessor George Schwarzbauer agreed Monday to appear before a special meeting of the City Council on June 2 to explain his assessing procedures.

The council's Finance Committee recommended the special session as an alternative to an earlier proposal to hold a public hearing.

Aldermen Glenn Thompson (13th) and Judith Winzenz (12th) withdrew a resolution proposing a hearing after Finance Chairman Alvin Tews (5th) predicted that it would "turn out to be a bunch of people up here, each one with a separate complaint."

Tews suggested the special council session at which, unlike a hearing, citizens could listen but would be barred from speaking unless the council voted special permission.

One citizen, Thomas Heiss, objected to the proposal. He urged forming a special committee, and said he wanted to be allowed to give the committee his views and "not be cut off."

Tews told Heiss the council should take first things first, saying "I do not know at this point what the (assessing) procedures are," and adding he would like to find out.

Ald. Winzenz suggested a somewhat broader purpose for the session. It should aim at learning whether there are large inequities in the present assessed valuations placed on property, "to see if there is a need for a city-wide reassessment."

Mrs. Winzenz said, "If there aren't large inequities, nothing would be done." But she added she believes "many people are at 1930s' valuation, and some people are at 1972 valuations."

Thompson and Ald. Robert Roemer (8th) clashed again over the proposal, in a replay of their exchange at an earlier committee meeting. "Anybody that has questions can go to the the assessor's office and get answers to any question at all," said Roemer.

Thompson said he does go to Schwarzbauer, but he said he wants the answers to be given publicly.

Roemer asked at one point whether Thompson would "crucify" Schwarzbauer in a public discussion, prompting Thompson to flare in self-defense. "I supported him in the last election and I'll support him in the next election," he said. But he added he has a right to ask questions and receive answers without being accused of trying to cut down the person he asks.

New Ideas For Education

people provide services beyond the classroom and supplement the classroom teacher's abilities to make the teaching process more effective, Westphal said.

In curriculum, Westphal must try to "provide a thread of sense through the entire curriculum from kindergarten through grade 12." Prior to the team, two men were in charge of curriculum, one for elementary and another for secondary providing less chance for continuity

This area also includes improving of curriculum, as well as coordinating it, and keeping tabs on textbooks, instructional materials and technology, all important aids in the teaching process.

Resource Personnel

Westphal also is responsible for the so-called resource personnel, such as the vocational and physical education personnel. This had been one of the gray areas as questions arose whether this group should be under the director of operations

Westphal said that communication with other team members tends to reduce gray area confusion. He has the authority to make decisions in his area but said he found it valuable to confer with other team members on projects

While he is seeking comment on the practicality of ideas, he can outline strengths and weaknesses of the existing system. "Education can be held accountable for what it is doing and what it had done," he said, echoing the feelings of the other team members.

He noted that it could be discomforting but should bring an improved system.

New Shiocton Chief Begins Work May 15

SHIOCTON — Eugene Bunnell will start work as the village's new police chief May 15.

Bunnell, 26, of route 1, Shiocton, was hired by the Village Board to replace Philip Calkins who resigned last January. Shiocton has been without full-time police services since then. Robert Nelson, an Outagamie County sheriff's deputy, has been working as a part-time policeman.

Clinton Tackman, chairman of the board's police committee, said Bunnell was one of eight candidates for the chief's job.

Bunnell, a native of the area, has had no previous police experience, but has had overseas duty with Marines. He has been working part-time at Cornland Fertilizer Co. here.

Bunnell becomes the fourth police chief here in five years. Raymond Muskavitch, who had held the job for several years, retired because of ill health. He was followed by Michael Reyes, now a county policeman, and by Calkins.

Cities Seek Higher Bartender Licenses

MADISON — Some municipal officials believe they see an opportunity to fatten local government treasuries slightly by charging higher fees for the licensing of professional bartenders of Wisconsin.

A bill to authorize an increase in the maximum bartender's license fee that may be charged by a municipality from $5 to $15 has been offered in the legislature at the request of the City of Wauwatosa

Fremont Man Dies in Farm Accident

FREMONT — A rural Fremont man was killed early Monday night in a tractor accident at his home

Alpheus Steiger, 71, route 1 was uprooting small trees in the farm yard with a tractor and chain when the farm vehicle, operated by a granddaughter, rolled and pinned him up against the milkhouse wall.

Steiger was dead on arrival at Riverside Community Hospital in Waupaca

Sheriff Loran Frazier investigated the accident.

Steiger was a member of Hope United Church of Christ and a member of the Fremont Volunteer Fire Department.

Survivors include his widow, two sons, one brother and nine grandchildren.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Hope United Church of Christ, with the Rev. Raymond Barz officiating. Burial will be in Lakeside Cemetery. Friends may call at Lewin Funeral Home, Fremont, after 4 p.m. Wednesday until 11 a.m Thursday and then at the church until the service.

Tax Relief Pushed

Donald Flanders called for county planners with regional coordination rather than regional planning commissions.

Flanders said he believed planning was the most significant thing a county can do. But, he said, "I don't feel that regional planning is the answer. I feel that day-to-day contacts can sell planning much better." He said he did support regional planning for such things as water and air pollution control and transportation.

Woehler also called for county planners with a regional clearinghouse to coordinate planning efforts. He said he felt that both the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission and the Fox Valley Council of Governments should be discontinued.

"There is no reason for us to continue to sponsor planning by the ton for others," he said of Northeastern.

Eugene Hollister of Walworth County, Wisconsin representative on the National Association of Counties' board of directors, also agreed on the planning issue, but said, "We must have social planning as well as physical planning. The social problems are the main problems right now."

Doyne, in addition to backing home rule for counties, called for more state action in other areas. He said the state should become involved in finding sites for solid waste disposal because of the problems local communities have in getting landfill sites. "The state should set aside areas for this," Doyne said.

First Tuesday On Viet Nam Replacements

BY TV SCOUT

8-10 — Channel 5 — The featured segment on First Tuesday is a report on the "forgotten men" of the Vietnam War — the thousands of U.S. servicemen being sent over as routine replacements while additional thousands are being brought home. Approximately 100,000 men will go to Vietnam as replacements this year and the film shows these men getting their first look at the Southeast Asian War.

6:30-7 — Channel 5 — Julia has a piece of propaganda for the anti-smoking forces. Corey (Marc Copage) finds a cigarette and, even holding it, is told by Earl J. Waggedorn (Michael Link) that he might get cancer of the finger. The boys are very conscious of the dangers of smoking and proud of their parents until they find Earl's dad smoking a cigar on the couch. (R)

6:30-7:30 — Channels 11-9 — Anjanette Comer becomes involved with Mod Squad when she is hit by Michael Cole's car during a chase to catch a robber. Love blooms as he cares for her dog, visits her in the hospital and feels guilty over her paralysis, which the accident caused. (R)

7-7:30 — Channels 2-7 — Green Acres has some funny stuff, Little Lori (Victoria Meyerink) has a cold, so Lisa (Eva Gabor) tells her the story of her "fodder," the King, and her own royal romance with Oliver (Eddie Albert) during their royalships' exile in Paris. (R)

(R)

7:30-9 — Channels 11-9 — "Night Slaves" on Movie of the Week is a good one, so it can be forgiven a few loose ends and a letdown at the end. It's mysterious and scary and handled in such a way that it's a long time before you know whether you are watching a science-fiction tale, or the mental breakdown of a man recovering from a car crash. James Franciscus plays this chap, with Lee Grant as his wife, Scott Marlowe as his business partner, Leslie Nielson a small town sheriff, Tisha Sterling a mysterious girl and Andrew Prine the village idiot. (R)

8:30-9 — Channels 2-7 — Archie (Carroll O'Connor) agrees to do a decent thing on All in the Family — give blood. But there's some information he wants before he'll bleed — who is going to get it, because Heaven for bid it should go to some black or brown or yellow or Jewish or. . . (R)

Seeds Look Frail, But Are Very Hardy

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

The voice of the nearly extinct blue whale, hughest of any creature that ever lived, can carry 100 miles underwater. Imagine being a male blue whale—and nagged by a wife that far away!

Although they look small and frail, seeds are among the hardiest forms of life on earth. Seeds of the lotus lily have germinated and grown after being buried for a thousand years.

Jobs are getting harder to find but last year over four million Americans held two or more jobs.

Royalty and members of the aristocracy in France used ivory eating utensils and drinking cups made from the tusks of arctic narwhals but which were thought by them to be unicorn horns. The horn of the legendary unicorn was thought by the ancients to have power to protect against poison.

Heavy Taxes

Some Americans have the feeling—especially at this time of the year—that we are the most heavily taxed people in the world. We aren't. We pay about 30 cents in taxes for every dollar earned. Eleven European countries have higher tax rates.

By the time he's 21 a typical U.S. student has spent about 15,000 hours in classroom instruction, it is estimated, but about 30,000 hours watching television.

Quotable notables: "I think America is richer in intelligence than any other country in the world; and that its intelligence is more scattered than in any other country of the world."—Will Durant.

Gypsy Violins

Hungary's wars have been among the most musical in history. For centuries her troops were led into battle by Gypsy violinists.

Sign in Manhattan bar: "Pay Cash or You're Trash."

Drug on the market: Some 200 million people throughout the world now use marijuana regularly, according to the World Health Organization. It is also thought that one in seven U.S. college students puff the weed at least once a week.

Capsule comments: "The hardest thing in the world to do," says Jules Podell, Copacabana owner, "is to look busy and important when you're not."

Deep Divers

Nature notes: A species of duck called Oldsquaw, believed to be the champion feathered diver, has reached a depth of 180 feet. The foot-long, spiny-skinned urchin fish can kill a mighty shark. After being swallowed by the shark, the urchin fish simply bores its way out through the side of the shark, leaving it to die. Ordinary goldfish live 20 to 30 years, but some Oriental types reach man's Biblical span—70 years.

Worth remembering: "Love doesn't make the world go round. It just makes some people dizzy."

Not all fun: Family tensions and emotional problems of all kinds tend to build up during holiday weekends. A mental health association here reports that on the Monday following such weekends it is flooded with calls seeking guidance or help.

'13 Clocks' This Weekend At Oshkosh

Musical Fairy Tale Opening Show at New Main Theater

OSHKOSH — The theater department at Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh will present a children's play, "The 13 Clocks," as its opening production for the new Fine Arts Center main theater.

The production will be presented at 7 p.m. Friday, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Saturday, and at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Although a children's play, it is a musical fairy tale which can be enjoyed by persons of all ages.

The play was adapted for the stage by Fred Sadoff from the James Thurber story of the same name. The music is by Mark Bucci, with lyrics by Bucci and Thurber.

Cartoon Image

Prof. Don Burdick of the theater faculty is directing the play. The new Main Theater has many advantages, one of which is the orchestra pit which will enhance children's productions.

Burdick is using a cartoon-like style in the scenery, costumes and makeup. Settings are by Prof. Robert Heise, WSU-O scene designer. He is incorporating a vaudeville type of backdrop, using cutout scenes for the castle and town and other scenes.

The costumes were designed by student David Alban. They are based both on his own ideas and on illustrations from the first edition of the Thurber short story. Medieval in design and color, they are exaggerated to adhere to the cartoon motif.

In the Cast

In the cast are Janice Gaffin, Evanston, Ill., as the princess; Ken Risch, Manitowoc, the prince and Jim Usher, Watertown, the duke. Others include Karen Templeton, Racine, Golux; Karin Smith, Racine, Hagga; Joe Jones, Oshkosh, Hark; Richard Nebel, Oshkosh, the traveler; Karen Medley, Oshkosh, as Jackadandy.

Portraying townspeople will be Debra Becker and James Pabian, Oshkosh; Lori Betts and Catherine Mulqueen, Milwaukee; Paul Gilmore, Cambria; Nancy Johnson, Shiocton; Larry Nass, Clinton; and Arlene Wasmund, Iron Ridge, Mich.

Veteran Actor John Wayne steps out of his usual tough guy role to comfort grandson Michael Ian Wayne, 3½-year-old son of Patrick Wayne, who plays with his father in the movie "Big Jake." Wayne's youngest son, John Ethan, also is in the film. Michael is one of Wayne's 18 grandchildren. (AP Wirephoto)

MacDowellers Bring Fame to Appleton

BY JINGO

There's a men's singing group in Appleton that's brought fame and honor to the city. It is the 37-year-old MacDowell Male Chorus, about to give its annual spring concert Saturday and Sunday nights in Lawrence Memorial Chapel.

These men (some helped found the Chorus in 1934 and are still singing) total a 100-voice membership and because they have such a large group MacDowell is able to do what they call "split" choral work effectively.

That they do it beautifully was proven in Milwaukee only last month at the International Big Sing when 1,200 members of 36 choruses or glee clubs in the Associated Male Choruses of America got together.

One of The Best

MacDowell is recognized as one of the most porfessional amateur singing groups in the Midwest. Besides the weekly rehearsals for home town programs, its members give several concerts throughout Wisconsin and neighboring states and through their programs have won great respect from their peers. Wherever they go, MacDowell and Conductor Edwin F. Zordel receive high praise.

When the group sang "Precious Lord, Take My Hand" in Milwaukee, there was a clamor for the music. One Detroit club took it back with them to try on for singing size.

The program of the Big Sing gives a sample of how the other clubs feel about Appleton's MacDowell. Jingo quotes from the booklet:

100 Members

"The 100 men from all walks of life make up the Appleton MacDowell Male Chorus. Men with one great common denominator — a love of singing. They sing for the fun of it — and put in many long, pleasure-packed hours in rehearsal so they can do it the way they know it ought to be done.

"A MacDowell concert is more than singing. It's a production. The traditional garb of a MacDoweller at concert time is a tuxedo, but sometimes he comes dressed as a pirate, a cowboy, a hunter, or a soldier, depending on the music's mood.

"Under the direction of Edwin F. Zordel, the Chorus has overwhelmed audiences with the reverent beauty of 'The Lord's Prayer,' swept them up with the magnificent 'Lost Chord' and left them holding their sides after 'The Rooster and the Chickens.'

'Serious when it must be, fun when it can be — that is the MacDowell tradition."

Jingo says it's all true and there's one way to find out for yourselves and spend a happy evening doing it. Come to the MacDowell Sing this weekend at the Chapel. Concert time is 8 p.m.

Appleton Native Ends 35 Years Service With U.S. Marine Corps

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Lt. Gen. William J. Van Ryzin, chief of staff, Headquarters Marine Corps, retired here today after more than 35 years of Marine Corps service.

The 57-year-old general was honored with a formal parade and retirement ceremony at Marine Barracks. During the ceremony, Van Ryzin was presented his second Distinguished Service Medal by Gen Leonard F. Chapman Jr., commandant of the Marine Corps.

Van Ryzin, an Appleton native, graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1935. Having completed four years ROTC training, he was commissioned a Marine Corps second lieutenant.

Prior to World War II, Van Ryzin completed Officers Basic School in Philadelphia; then served in China; at San Diego, Calif.; Ft. Monroe, Va., and Pearl Harbor.

He was serving in Palmyra Islands as the commanding officer, Marine Detachment 1st Defense Battalion when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor in December 1941.

During the remainder of World War II he served on Tinian; with the 12th Marines, 3d Marine Division; the 11th Marines, 1st Marine Division; and took part in the occupation of Northern China.

Lt. Gen. William J. Van Ryzin participates in ceremonies marking the end of a 35-year Marine career.

Following World War II he served in various posts, and was promoted to colonel in 1951. In August 1955, he was named Chief of Staff, 3d Marine Division.

He was promoted to brigadier general in February 1959, and was named deputy assistant chief of staff, G-3, at Headquarters Marine Corps. From July 1960 until August 1963, he served as chief of staff for the commander in chief, U.S. Naval Forces, Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean (CINCNELM). Before his departure from CINCNELM he was promoted to major general and was awarded the Joint Service Commendation Medal.

Van Ryzin assumed command of the 2nd Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N. C., upon return to the United States. In May 1965, he was assigned to Headquarters Marine Corps as assistant chief of staff, G-4. For his service in this billet he was awarded the Legion of Merit.

In February 1968 Van Ryzin began a tour in Vietnam as deputy commander, III Marine Amphibious Force, for which he received a Gold Star in lieu of his second Legion of Merit with Combat "V".

Nominated for three-star rank by President Lyndon B. Johnson on May 6, 1968, Van Ryzin was promoted to lieutenant general June 1, 1968, and designated chief of staff at Headquarters Marine Corps. While serving in this capacity, he was awarded his first Distinguished Service Medal.

Van Ryzin and his wife, the former Evelyn Ingenthron of Appleton, have two sons: Peter J., also a Marine officer; and Joseph. They will reside in Shepherdstown, W. Va.

Surveyed to Death By Questionnaires

BY ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — The world will not end with a bang or a whimper. It will probably end with a poll. Americans are being polled to death at the moment, and you can't leave your house without someone asking how you feel about something.

The other day I had to fly up to New York. As I adjusted my seat and got ready to snooze, the stewardess handed me a questionnaire. "Would you mind filling this out for our airline?" I looked at the questions. "Are you happy with our service?" "How many drinks did you buy?" "What is your color preference for our baggage racks?" "Why did you choose to fly this airline?"

I dutifully filled out the questionnaire and went to my hotel. After checking into the room I found a questionaire on the nightstand.

"The management would be grateful if you will fill out the following: Did you find the room made up when you checked in? Were there enough towels in the bathroom? Wash cloths? How often do you plan to take a bath during your stay?" And so on and so forth.

I canceled my lunch so I could fill out the questionnaire honestly. After turning it over to the manager I went out to hail a taxi. A pretty girl in a mini skirt with a clipboard came up and said, "Would you answer a few questions for a survey our company is doing on New York tourism?"

"I'm very late," I pleaded.

"It will only take a moment. How long have you been waiting for a taxi?"

"Just a few moments. There's one," I said.

"Please, sir. I still have some questions to ask you."

"Hurry," I pleaded.

"Why did you come to New York?"

"For meetings," I said anxiously.

"Then not for pleasure?"

"Well, I'm hoping to get some pleasure in, but I can't until I find out what they tell me at the meetings. There goes another taxi."

She stopped me from hailing it and continued. "What irks you the most about New York City?"

"Being polled while I'm trying to hail a taxi."

"I have only 20 more questions to ask, sir. When you walk around New York, do you look in the shop windows?" And so on and so forth.

I finally got rid of her, but there were no taxis in sight so I had to walk to my appointment. Ten blocks later I was stopped by a man with a briefcase who said, "I beg your pardon, but could you tell me if you think Mayor Lindsay is doing better, doing worse or holding his own in New York City?"

"I don't know I'm a stranger here. I live in Washington."

"Washington?" He took another poll out of his briefcase. "Do you think President Nixon is doing better, doing worse or holding his own?"

"What gives?" I asked. "First you ask me about Lindsay, then Nixon?"

"Don't tell anyone," he said. "But I'm moonlighting and working for two political pollsters at the same time."

I tried to get around him but he blocked my path. "Look, if you don't want to talk about politics, I'm also doing a survey for a market research company on chocolate-flavored cigars."

I started to run down the street and he followed me so I sought sanctuary in a church on Fifth Avenue.

The service had just finished and a minister handed me a mimeographed sheet of paper which said "In order to make our afternoon services more relevant would you kindly tell us whether you were: (A) Emotionally involved. (B) Spiritually fulfilled. (C) Satisfied with the musical number selected by our organist. (D) Did you have a good view of the altar?"

I filled it out and left. The man with the briefcase was standing in front of the church. "How about giving me your thoughts on hot pants?"

To Your Good Health

Heart Enlargement Results From Strain

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have never seen an article in your column on an enlarged heart. Is it serious? Do you have a booklet on this particular condition? — B. T.

Dear Doctor: How serious is heart enlargement and what should be done for it? Our physician says not to worry about it, but I do not feel good, have chest pains, and take medication for high blood pressure. — Mrs. C.

Well, maybe I haven't written about this very recently, but, yes, I have a booklet, called "How to Take Care of Your Heart," which covers that along with other aspects of how the heart works, and a general understanding of the heart is necessary to gain a clear idea of the meaning of enlargement. Booklet is available by mail — send 25 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Thosteson, care of The Post-Crescent for a copy.

Heart enlargement results from some abnormal strain on the heart muscle (the muscle, cup-shaped, or "crown-shaped," surrounds the heart chambers).

Best way to determine such enlargement is by X ray, to show size and shape. The enlargement means that the heart muscle has thickened and stretched — as muscles do when subjected to heavy use.

Principal causes of enlargement are high blood pressure; disorders of the heart valves which require the heart to work harder to pump the requisite amount of blood; and congenital defects of the heart. (Beri-beri, a vitamin deficiency, causes enlargement but that is a rare cause in this part of the world.)

When you were told "not to worry about it," your doctor undoubtedly had in mind the fact that an enlarged heart, with thickened heart muscle, can still be an efficient heart. Just finding enlargement is not cause for panic.

But since it is a clear indication of something wrong, then obviously the underlying condition should be treated. In Mrs. C.'s case, her high blood pressure is being treated. Quite often high blood pressure needs something more than just medicine. The patient may need to lose weight, may be using too much tobacco, may have skidded into a living situation involving too much tension.

In the other causes of enlargement, valve disorders often can be corrected surgically, or an artificial valve inserted. Congenital defects of various types are being repaired by heart surgery, too.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Just a note to the parents of that lefthanded boy. Our daughter is lefthanded also, and it got to be a constant argument between my husband and me. We talked to our doctor.

Today she eats lefthanded and there aren't any more arguments. Meal times are a pleasure. — J. B.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I got a new pressure cooker (aluminum) and my friends tell me it is possible to get aluminum poisoning from food cooked in it, and it also has a tendency to cancer. How true is this? — Mrs. N. W.

Not true at all. People have been cooking in aluminum utensils for a great many years. Unhappily, some of the rumors about aluminum utensils are traced back to people trying to sell utensils made of other metals.

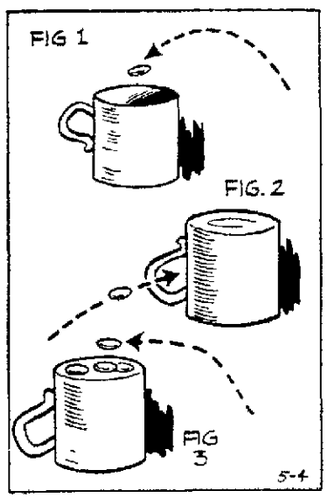
Try Tiddlywinks Using Coffee Mug Target

BY CAPPY DICK

If you have some tiddlywinks disks, use them to play a game called "Three-Step Tiddlywinks" A coffee mug serves as the target.



15 Shots Allowed

To play the game a player must accomplish the three steps shown in figures 1, 2 and 3. The first step requires him to land as many disks inside the coffee mug as he can Step 2 requires him to shoot as many disks as he can through the handle of the mug. Step 3 calls upon him to land as many disks as he can on top of the upturned mug.

Here is how to score:

For each disk that lands in the mug, the player earns five points

For every disk he shoots through the mug handle he earns 20 points.

For each disk that lands atop the upturned mug and remains, he earns five points.

Each player gets five disks to shoot for each step. The highest score after every player has had 15 shots wins the game.

If you have no tiddlywinks disks, medium-sized, flat buttons may be used with a larger button serving as a shooter.

Foxes Rap Twins, Take Over Lead

WISCONSIN RAPIDS — The Appleton Foxes, bunching all of their runs in the middle three innings, pounded Wisconsin Rapids, 8-2, and took over sole possession of first place in the Midwest League's Northern Division Monday night.

Appleton, now 4-2 for the season, went into the contest tied with Cedar Rapids and Waterloo, but the Cardinals dropped a 3-2 decision to Quad Cities, and the Royals fell to Clinton, 6-2.

Gary Cortopassi hurled the distance in his first start for the Foxes, scattering five hits, fanning nine batters and walking five. He was touched for runs in the seventh and eighth frames after Appleton had built a commanding 8-0 lead.

The loss was the fifth in six starts for Wisconsin Rapids, which occupies the cellar. The teams conclude their series tonight.

Rap Seven Hits

Appleton collected seven hits off three Twins pitchers. The loser was starter Jeff Hooper, who was charged with six of the hits and seven runs in working the first 5 1-3 innings.

One of the hits off Hooper was a 3-run home run — the first circuit drive for the 1971 Foxes — by Larry Linville in the fifth inning.

3-Run 5th

After a scoreless first three innings, Brian Downing got things started for Appleton in the fourth with an infield hit. Another infield hit by Edito Arteaga and an ensuing throwing error by the catcher put runners at second and third.

Wayne Francingues then stroked a sacrifice fly to center to break the ice.

With a 4-0 advantage, the Foxes mounted their final burst in the sixth inning, chasing Hooper in the process. Jerry Hairston's fielder's choice with the bases loaded brought in the first marker, and the Linville walked to force in the second.

Lamar Johnson slapped a single off reliever Jim Hughes to plate both Hairston and Sapp.

Tom Lynch's double accounted for the Twins' first run in

Ewing Will be Out Indefinitely

Sam Ewing, Appleton's leading hitter, is out indefinitely with a fractured cheekbone received in Sunday's game against Cedar Rapids.

Ewing was injured when he slid into second base breaking up a double play.

He is still in Appleton awaiting word from the Chicago White Sox on whether surgery will be performed here or in Chicago.

Joan Fay Back In the Running For High Finish

Joan Fay, a 15th-place finisher in the 1970 Bowl-O-Rama, crashed an 847 series to vault into the runnerup spot in Women's Class B competition at 41 Bowl Monday night.

Mrs. Fay, a Waupaca housewife and mother of four children, said she was simply "trying to get close" in her bid to approach the leading total of 866 hit by Kaukauna's Nancy Handevidt April 27. She did nudge ahead of the former second place score of 846 posted by Appleton's Janet Driessen.

A 132-average bowler in the Wednesday night Women's and Saturday Mixed Couples Leagues at Waupaca's Uptown Lanes, Mrs. Fay started her foursome with a modest 136 scratch game. However, she then turned on the steam with lines of 178, 157 and 184 for 655, and a hefty 192-pin handicap pushed her final count to 847.

In last year's Post-Crescent tourney, Mrs. Fay posted an 845 total.

The only other change in B-O-R standings saw Green Bay's Mary Magnuson power an 806 for the No. 10 spot in Women's Class A.

She strung together scratch games of 178, 170, 180 and 154 toward a 682 aggregate. A handicap of 124 pins for four lines hiked the final count to 806.

Squad prize winners for the evening were Mrs. Fay, who took the women's gift with her 232 game with handicap (184 scratch), and Waupaca's Jim Nelson, who slammed 266 (220 scratch).

Balk Call Overruled; Cubs Lose, 3-2

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Was it a balk or wasn't it? Well . . . yes . . . and no. Would you believe almost? How about maybe?

The Chicago Cubs still don't believe it. They feel the balk that wasn't cost them a ballgame Monday night, in New York and let the Mets make off with a 3-2 victory on Tommie Agee's pinch single with two out in the 11th inning.

In the only other major league action, the Philadelphia Phillies edged the St. Louis Cardinals by an identical 3-2 score.

Steps Off Mound

That was the situation when the argument started at Shea Stadium Monday night. Score tied 2-all, top of the ninth, bases loaded and Ron Santo, who had driven in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning, at bat.

Reliever Tug McGraw starts his windup, then steps back off the mound. "Balk!" yells third base umpire Stan Landes, and Ken Holtzman, the runner at third, trots happily plateward.

"No balk," overrules plate umpire Mel Steiner, explaining that he had signaled for time before McGraw started his move.

As you might expect, here comes Leo Durocher, the Chicago manager.

"How could you call time after he called a balk?" Durocher wants to know. "If you'll listen to me, I'll explain it to you," cajoles Steiner. "I signaled for time before the balk."

End of argument. What could Durocher say. The Lip was speechless and he remained so afterwards.

"It happens 15 or 20 times a game," said Steiner. "Santo

Dadian Wins Tournament in Sudden Death

SHEBOYGAN — Milwaukee's Archie Dadian edged Sheboygan Pine Hills' Tom Beaumont in sudden death for the victory in the Riverdale Tournament of Champions Monday.

Dadian sank a birdie on the third extra hole to beat Beaumont. Both had tied with 2-under-par 69s over the initial 18 holes of play.

Last year's champion, Waupaca's Bob Martin, slipped to an 81 Monday. He won the 1970 meet with a 69.

Other scores posted by area golfers in the meet include: Waupaca pro Gene Giles, 73; Nic Wahl, Green Bay Oneida, 74; Ridgeway pro Bill Huxford, 75; Butte des Morts' Dick Spangenberg, 75; Oneida pro Ed Langert, 75; former Butte des Morts assistant and now Watertown Rivermoor pro Rick Swift, 75; Ridgeway's Elmer Selig, 76; North Shore pro George Nackel, 77; and Butte des Morts' Bill Matini, 80.

NFL Team Irate; Greg 2nd Toronto Signee

Barton Jumps Eagles for CFL Argos

TORONTO (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League had counted on Greg Barton becoming their No. 1 quarterback. What they didn't count on was the persuasiveness of the Toronto Argonauts.

To get Barton from Detroit, where he had spent three years on the bench, the Eagles gave the Lions their No. 2 pick in last year's draft and next year's second and third-round selections. Then they traded their top quarterback, Norm Snead, to Minnesota.

But Barton, whose entire pro career consists of one incomplete pass, failed to show up last week to sign with Philadelphia. On Monday, however, he flew to Toronto from Hawaii and signed a four-year contract with the Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

2nd Quarterback

It's the second United States quarterback to sign with the Argos. Earlier they got Heisman Trophy winner Joe Theismann of Notre Dame, who supposedly had a verbal agreement to sign with Miami of the NFL.

Also on Monday, the Montreal Alouettes of the CFL announced the signing of linebackers Dick Biddle of Duke and Jack Chauvet of the University of Miami.

Charges of tampering flew about Barton's head early in March and reached the office of CFL Commissioner Jake Gandaur.

"Early in March, Mark Duncan of the NFL office called me," Gandaur said. "He said that Philadelphia had complained that Toronto had contacted Barton by telephone.

"I wrote the Argos on March 15, telling them the player was under contract until May 1 and must not be contacted until after that date.

Need Evidence

"If Philadelphia wants to complain, it must do so to its league office and that league office then complains to the Canadian office. They must have pretty substantial evidence of intentional tampering before making such a complaint."

Barton said he had not notified the Eagles of his intention to sign with Toronto.

"Philadelphia's offer was very fair," he said. "But if I hadn't come to terms here, I'd have talked to another two or three clubs."

He said he "didn't get a fair chance at Detroit. "But I'm not griping. They have two good quarterbacks. I felt I had to get out of there. And they were good about it—they traded me to a team I could have played for."

Reaction was swift from the NFL.

Pete Retzlaff, Eagles general manager, said that if Barton had signed with another NFL team "the league would have made sure we received something in return for him. But the Canadian league isn't governed by our constitution. I don't know what we can do.

"He just disappears and then pops up in Toronto," Retzlaff said. "If he wanted more money, he owed us the courtesy of coming back to us."

St. John Gains First Track Win Over Xavier

The St. John High School track team, paced by double wins by Jeff Jansen and Paul Van Groll, handed Xavier a 69-58 setback here Monday afternoon.

It was the first time in the Dutchmen's history that they beat the Hawks in a dual meet.

Jansen, in winning the 440, set a new school record with a time of 51.95 seconds. In finishing second in the long jump competition, he also set a new St. John track mark with a distance of 20 feet 10 inches. Jansen also took laurels in the 100-yard dash with a time of 10.55 seconds.

Van Groll grabbed firsts in the shot put and discus competitions. He had a distance of 45 feet, 8 inches in the shot, and he hurled the discus 139-8½.

The Chuter's Frank Weigert set a new school record in the 2-mile run, with a time of 10:22.7.

Gary Nickasch was Xavier's only double winner, taking the high hurdles in :16.6 and the low hurdles in :22.6.

Have Lost to Canadiens Three Times

Confident Black Hawks to Open Final Stanley Cup Round Tonight

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP) — Brimming with confidence, the Chicago Black Hawks take on the Montreal Canadiens tonight to open the final round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Three times these two teams have met in the final round and all three times the Canadiens have won the coveted Cup, the last being in 1965 in a series which went the full distance of seven games.

This time the Hawks, champions of the Western Division of the National Hockey League, feel confident despite a gruelling seven-game series with the New York Rangers which ended Sunday night with a 4-2 victory.

Montreal, having finished third in the Eastern Division, upset Boston in the first round and then defeated Minnesota in a six-game series which ended Thursday.

Somewhat Weary

For all practical purposes, the Hawks should be somewhat weary while the Canadiens should hit the ice well rested.

"Maybe they'll be a little fresher," said Bobby Hull, "that could be a problem. But let's wait and see. Montreal is coming off a team which is not quite the team we are."

Goalie Tony Esposito, who has played every minute of the playoffs and should see full time duty the rest of the way, admitted the New York series was tough with its three overtime games but insisted the Hawks will be up to the job.

Regardless of how rapidly the Hawks recover, Coach Billy Reay admitted Monday he would have welcomed an extra day of rest.

The Hawks lost to Montreal in the Stanley Cup finals in 1931, 1944 and 1965. It's the latter series that Reay remembers.

"We were playing Detroit in the semifinals and we weren't supposed to win," said Reay. "After all they were the champions. But we won it in six games, went back to the hotel and the next day we were on our way to Montreal.

Doubtful List

"All our reaction came against Detroit and we didn't have much left. This year we're better prepared mentally and hope for a better start."

The Hawks have brought up Jim McCloud as back up goalie for Esposito but he'll not see action unless an emergency occurs.

Center Pit Martin, however, is on the doubtful list with a knee injury. Martin suffered the injury a week ago Sunday in New York and aggravated it early in last Sunday's game.

"Right now he's doubtful," said Reay. "But you can never tell. He might play if the swelling goes down."

If Martin is not available, Reay could use Lou Angotti between Chico Maki and Bobby Hull or he could shift Maki to center and put Eric Nesterenko at right wing.

The second game of the best-of-seven series will be played Thursday night in Chicago. The two teams then go to Montreal for games Sunday afternoon and Tuesday night.

Threatened Species

Note Good Comeback By Prairie Chicken In Central Wisconsin

STEVENS POINT, Wis (AP) — The prairie chicken, a threatened wildlife species, is making a comback in Central Wisconsin.

Leave the shotgun on the wall; there isn't a huntable population yet and probably never will be.

But there's an upsurge on the booming grounds, and John Berkhahn of the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources says the species' furture is more secure than at any time in the last 10 or 15 years.

The Buena Vista and Leola Marshes south of Stevens Point, the Mead Wildlife area northwest of Stevens Point, and a couple of spots west of here are about the last strongholds in Wisconsin of the once abundant prairie grouse.

When the grassland habitat shrank, the birds dwindled. Even management efforts didn't halt the decline immediately, and two years ago the population was at a low ebb.

Up 50 Per Cent

Then an upturn was noticed last year. And this spring, said Berkhahn, numbers are up 40 to 50 per cent at Buena Vista Leola and 50 to 60 per cent at Mead.

Only west of Stevens Point has there been no gain. There, the population is static at best, said Ray Anderson of the Stevens Point University faculty, who has made a long-term study of these flocks.

Habitat improvement, with some help from the wildlife cycle, seems responsible for the gains.

But even now the birds can hardly be classed as abundant. Berkhahn says there are twice as many was two years ago, but still only about 1,000.

The population estimates come from observers in blinds on booming grounds, where the big grouse come every spring to put on a mating dance, thumping or "booming" their breasts.

Monumental Study

Fred and Fran Hamerstrom of Plainfield began a monumental study of the prairie chicken for the DNR about 20 years ago, and their research has been the basis for managing the species in Wisconsin.

The key is grassland. When brush and trees invade the open country, the birds disappear, even if hunting is banned and foxes in the neighborhood are exterminated.

So the emphasis on management is keeping big blocks of countryside open.

How much the wildlife cycle has played in the prairie chicken comeback is a matter of opinion.

Some wildlife specialists poopooh the cycle. But the Hamerstroms believe in it strongly.

The cycle is supposed to last 10 years, with wildlife populations hitting a peak on or about the years ending in "1."

SPORT FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW by John Behnke

Here's an oddity . . . A man once became the manager of a big league baseball team even though he actually didn't know anything about baseball! . . . He was Judge Emil Fuchs who inherited the presidency of the Braves in 1929 and astounded everyone then by deciding to become the manager . . . Judge Fuchs lasted one season, and the Braves finished last.

Here's an oddity about baseball salaries . . . Four players on the San Francisco Giants, Willie Mays, Willie McCovey, Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry, reportedly make more money than all 25 players on the San Diego Padres put together!

Did you know that some of the greatest pitchers of all-time never pitched a no-hit game during their entire big league careers? . . . Lefty Grove, Red Ruffing, Grover Alexander, Rube Waddell, Lefty Gomez, Robin Roberts, Early Wynn and Whitey Ford never pitched a no-hitter.

Jinx Holds as Colonels Lose In ABA Playoff

Kentucky Has Not Won This Season In Salt Palace

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Kentucky Coach Frank Ramsey points to Wednesday's game as the key contest in the American Basketball Association's championship playoff.

"Well be in there Wednesday," Ramsey said Monday night after his Colonels absorbed a 136-117 pasting at the hands of the Utah Stars in the opening game of the series.

"If we are going to be a threat in this series, we've got to win Wednesday," Ramsey said.

Kentucky started off Monday's game as if it would break a season-long jinx in the Salt Palace. The Colonels have yet to win a game in the 13,200-seat facility.

Hit 17 Points

Dan Issel scored 17 points in the first quarter as the Colonels jumped to a 12-point lead and led 35-26 entering the second quarter.

Then Utah's George Stone, a 6-8 reserve forward, got hot and it was all over.

Led by Stone, who scored 20 points in a 12-minute spree, Utah collected 50 points in the second quarter and piled up a margin that the Colonels couldn't overcome.

That 50-point outburst broke the ABA's playoff record for scoring in one quarter. The old record of 48 was set in 1968 by Pittsburgh and tied last year by Texas.

Issel, after a tremendous start, was held to 10 points the rest of the game, a key factor in Utah's victory. Guard Darrell Carrier picked up the slack for the Colonels, hitting 36 points including six three-pointers.

Great Shooter

Utah Coach Bill Sharman said, "Issel is such a fantastic player and a great shooter that nobody is going to shut him off. But we started picking him up higher and gave Zelmo Beaty a little help."

Beaty and Stone led Utah scoring with 26 each. Ron Boone, another reserve, added 24. Stone grabbed 12 rebounds and Beaty had 16.

The Colonels got little punch besides Issel and Carrier. Louie Dampier had just three points and no other starter hit double figures.

After Wednesday's game in Salt Lake City, the teams switch to Louisville for Friday night and Saturday afternoon games. Then they alternate as needed for the rest of the series.

Monday's crowd of 12,051 brought Utah's home playoff attendance to 61,157 for six games.

Rico Carty's Stand-in Leads Hitters

ATLANTA (AP) — "I feel that if I had gotten off to a slow start, they would have sent me out," says Ralph Garr of the Braves.

So the young man Atlanta fans have nicknamed "Road Runner" because of his speed got off to a fast start—fast enough to carry him quickly to the No. 1 spot among National League hitters.

Ralph Garr

His average has been above .400 most of the season and reached a season high .434 last weekend. It is currently .400.

Ironically, the 25-year-old Grambling graduate might not be in the Brave lineup if it hadn't been for an injury suffered by the fellow who led the league in hitting last year, Atlanta leftfielder Rico Carty.

Carty injured a knee playing winter ball and is lost to the Braves for at least half the season.

Brewers Dealt Southpaw for Kosco

Castoff Downing Dodger Mound Ace

LOS ANGELES (AP) They said Al Downing was washed up. As he packed his bags and went west in an "afterthought trade," Downing heard the reports that he was all but through.

As a New York Yankee he had had a few good seasons and a few mediocre ones then bounced around in a series of trades. In February, when the Los Angeles Dodgers got him, the trade did not make headlines. The man the Dodgers gave up was utility outfielder Andy Kosco.

Today Downing is the ace of the Dodgers' staff, even though he was considered only insurance when he came. He's proven that a change of scenery can mean a lot.

"Aside from Al," says Dodgers Manager Walter Alston, "I'll tell you what I think of our pitching so far.

"You could put Don Sutton, Bill Singer and Claude Osteen in a basket, shake 'em up, pick one out and get the same kind of job no matter which one you had selected.

Partially responsible for the problems this year are injuries and illness. Sutton, 0-3, has had a bronchial problem. Singer, 2-5, struck by hepatitis last year, has been suffering from stiffness in his shoulder all season. Osteen is only 3-2 and has failed to win his last two times out.

First Start

Downing wasn't particularly sharp in the spring and it was with trepidation that the Dodgers gave him his first assignment April 9 in relief against the San Diego Padres.

He worked five and two-thirds innings, allowed just two hits, walked two and struck out four.

Six days later he got his first start and went all the way, scattering nine hits and beating St. Louis 2-1.

Five days after that, he was again on the mound against the Padres—and he came up with his second straight complete game victory, 6-2.

He was beaten 2-0 at Cincinnati, working seven innings, then had no decision in seven and one-third at Pittsburgh. His 1.42 earned run average is the best mark of the Los Angeles starters.

So the task of repairing the once-mighty Dodgers pitching staff falls on the shoulders of 5-foot-11, 180-pound Downing, who last year split his time between Oakland and Milwaukee, recording 5-13 with a combined ERA of 3.53.

Ninth Loop Member

SWC Accepts Houston

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — The Southwest Conference has accepted the University of Houston as a member but the Cougars will not begin competing for the league's football crown until at least 1976.

Houston, which becomes the ninth member of the SWC, will play for the conference basketball title in 1975-6 and field teams in other sports for the 1973-4 school year.

"Hopefully Houston will be able to play for the football championship in 1976," said Howard Grubbs, conference executive secretary.

11-Game Schedules

"We have to make a lot of scheduling adjustments. The first really clear year is 1980. A number of teams have 11-game schedules filled through 1977, 1978 and 1979 which will have to be changed.

Grubbs said special meetings will get under way soon to iron out the scheduling problems.

Houston will continue to compete in post-season football playoffs as an independent until 1976. It will keep all the receipts it earns from bowl competition.

Markovits Keeps Y Table Tennis Tourney Crown

Gabor Markovits retained his championship in the sixth annual table tennis tournament at the Appleton YMCA Saturday.

Markovits beat Manitowoc's John Salzman, 21-13, 21-10, in the finals. Markovits also teamed with Don Schulz to win the doubles crown. They beat John Gurholt and Dave Schine, 21-10, 21-13, in the finals.

In the consolation finals, Jack Fielkow beat Daniel Flauger, 21-16 and 21-15.

Markovits had beaten Peter Malley in the semi-finals, while Salzman stopped Ken Schuh in the semis.

Canonero Win Hikes Interest At Preakness

Over 14 Entries Will Mean Running Of Two Divisions

BALTIMORE (AP) — Local racing fans who regard the Kentucky Derby as a weeding-out race for the Preakness are having trouble supporting the hypothesis this year.

Not surprisingly, the upset victory by Canonero II in the 20-horse Kentucky Derby last Saturday has done little to scare off the opposition for the second of the Triple Crown races.

The Kentucky-bred, who was sold for $1,200 as a yearling and then was raced in Venezuela, returned $19.40 for a $2 bet after winning the Derby, but the payoff probably would have been astronomical had he not been made one of six field horses.

Churchill Downs officials hit the other five field horses right on the nose, as they finished in the last five positions. But Canonero II, with Gustavo Avila aboard, came out of the pack to win by a widening 3¾ lengths.

Continues Quest

From five to seven of the Derby horses who trailed Canonero II are expected to face the colt again at Pimlico in the May 15 Preakness as he continues the quest to become the first Triple Crown winner since Citation in 1948.

Another 10 or 11 horses quartered at eastern tracks, headed by Good Behaving, Salem, Executioner, Limit To Reason, Dynatic, Your Excellency and Leematt, are considered possibilities.

The $150,000 - added Preakness, which at 1 3/16 miles is shorter than the 1¼ mile Derby, will be run on a track which is much narrower than Churchill Downs.

So, if more than 14 entries are made, the Preakness will have to be run in two divisions for only the second time in history.

The first time was in 1918, when there were 26 entries. Ten scratches resulted in one division of 10 horses and one of six.

Unofficial Indianapolis Record

Donohue Sets 174.757 mph. Pace

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 1970 runnerup in the Indianapolis 500-mile race, Mark Donohue, has started his drive for the checkered flag Memorial Day.

Driving a brand new turbo-charged Offenhauser, Donohue Monday set an unofficial average track record of 174.757 miles per hour.

Donohue also was the first on the track when the Indianapolis Motor Speedway track opened Saturday.

This year Donohue is a member of the McLaren driving team.

After the unofficial-record lap, Donohue said, "I'm not sure what this car can do. That's what we're here to find out."

Three Laps

Donohue wasn't sure whether the cool, dry weather had anything to do with his three straight laps averaging more than 174 miles per hour.

The car, decked out in the bright orange McLaren colors, is a radical new design sporting short stubby wings on the front of the car in front of the wheels and a stationary car-wide wing at the rear of the car.

The official lap record at the Speedway stands at 171.953 miles per hour. It was set by Joe Leonard in a turbine car during qualifications for the 1968 Indianapolis 500.

Donohue's mark will not count as a track record because it came during practice.

In all, Monday 11 drivers in 10 cars toured the 2½ mile track, the third day of practice.

Badgers Hand Titans Pair of 2-1 Reversals

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Unearned runs helped Wisconsin to a pair of 2-1 victories over Oshkosh State in a non-conference baseball doubleheader Monday.

Pitcher John Stoffel held Wisconsin to three hits in the opener. But errors contributed to Badger scores in the sixth and seventh innings after the Titans scored their run in the opening inning.

Wisconsin collected an unearned run in the second inning of the nightcap. Oshkosh tied the game 1-1 in the fourth. Greg O'Brien homered for Wisconsin's winning tally in the sixth.

Northern Michigan Gets Steif

MARQUETTE, Mich. (ap) — Northern Michigan University announced the signing Monday of two basketball stars from Wausau, Wis., including Wisconsin all-stater Bob Steif.

Steif, 6-foot-5 and 210 pounds, led East High school to a berth in the Wisconsin public high school basketball tournament, which he led in individual scoring with 90 points and rebounds with 45.

A first-team selection on The Associated Press all-state team, he averaged 26.6 points per game last season.

Steif has career totals of 1,504 points and 1,107 rebounds, both school records.

Northern Michigan coach Glenn Brown said the Wildcats have also landed Dan Yelich, a Wausau East playmaker.

Reds Miss Star

Sparky Anxious for Tolan's Recovery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cincinnati outfielder Bobby Tolan, who burned up the base paths in 1970, is bringing back a gleam to Manager Sparky Anderson's eyes with his running on the sidelines.

"His running seems to be getting better everyday," Anderson said about the injured player as the Reds prepared to open a series against Los Angeles tonight.

Anderson said that he expects Tolan to be ready for pinch-hitting roles in about two weeks.

"He still can't play in the field but he can pinch hit," Anderson continued.

Tolan led the National League last year with 57 stolen bases and added a .316 batting average. 80 runs batted in and 112 runs scored, but he ruptured an Achilles tendon last January in an exhibition basketball game.

"I knew right then we were in trouble," lamented Anderson.

Without Tolan, the Reds stand in fifth place in the West Division, 8 1-2 games behind first place San Francisco. Last year, the Reds held first place every day except for one in winning the division title en route to the pennant.

"If we had Bobby all year, we might have been in first place right now," Anderson said. "That could have been the difference for us."

"I'd be happy if we can keep things bunched up until Tolan's ready. We've really missed him. If we can keep within five games of the lead at the All-Star break we'll be all right."

Tolan, not being boastful, commented as he sat in the press box of a recent game. "You never realize how much you mean to a team until you aren't playing."

Although Tolan is on the disabled list, he has been suiting up and working out with the team before games. He made the road trip here also.

Cubs Lose to Mets in 11th was scratching around in the dirt with his spikes trying to get set and I held up my hand for time. I can't let McGraw quick-pitch him, can I? I've got to protect the hitter.

"Santo complained that he was in the batter's box. I told him I don't have to protect him when he's out of the box, do I?"

Santo then watched a third strike and Johnny Callison tapped to first for the third out.

The Mets won it when Jerry Grote, who doubled home their first run in the fourth inning, lashed a two-out double in the 11th, his fourth hit, off loser Holtzman, 0-4.

After an intentional pass to Tim Foli, Agee, who didn't start because of bruised ribs, batted for McGraw, 3-1, and punched a 3-2 pitch to right field.

"I saw Steiner put his hand up," McGraw said. "That's why I stopped my windup. In fact, I'm glad it was called the way it was I didn't think it was a balk at all. I thought I stepped off the mound properly. Now I know."

McGraw picked up the triumph and also singled in his only at-bat, giving him two hits in three trips.

Grote singled in the seventh, took third on Foli's double and scored on Bud Harrelson's sacrifice fly to put the Mets ahead 2-1. The Cubs tied it in the eighth when Billy Williams drilled his sixth home run of the season.

In the night's only other game, the Phillies stopped the Cardinals 3-2 as Larry Bowa knocked in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning

Traatz Paces Shiocton

SHIOCTON — Ron Traatz smacked a pair of singles and a double and drove home three runs in leading Shiocton to a 6-1 non-conference win over Freedom here Monday afternoon.

The Chiefs tallied two runs in the first inning on Traatz' single and consecutive doubles by Dick Clausen and Rick Puffe.

Shiocton scored again the third on Traatz' 2-bagger, and they added three more runs in the sixth on a pair of free passes and singles by Puffe and Traatz.

Freedom's run came in the fifth on a double by Tony Brockman. The Irish loaded the bases in the sixth with one out when Shiocton's starter, Mark Johnson, was relieved by Clausen. Clausen, who beat Wautoma, 4-1, last week by hurling a 1-hitter, struck out all five Irish batters he faced to end the ball game

Truckers Top New London

Ehlert Pitches 5-Hitter and Strikes Out 12

NEW LONDON — Five errors helped Clintonville to a 6-2 non-conference victory over New London Monday at Hatten Park.

Four of the miscues were of the outfield variety and overshadowed good pitching by three young pitchers.

New London pushed across both of its runs in the first inning on a pair of walks, Steve Sanders' single and Jim Sommers' single.

Clintonville took the lead in the third with a 4-run rally. The Truckers tallied single runs in the second and fourth frames.

Rusty Ehlert gave five hits, struck out 12 and issued two walks in going the route for the win Sophomores Tom Fredericks and Rick Kaepernick each worked three innings for New London, with freshman Jim Snyder hurling the final inning.

Craig LeBeau slapped two hits in three at-bats, Mike Smith was 2-for-2 and LeBeau and Bill Mullarkey had triples for the Truckers.

Sanders was 2-for-3 for New London, while Snyder hit a triple.

Kickoff Moved Up

Sugar Bowl Faces Crucial Year

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Sugar Bowl, fighting to maintain the prestige of being one of the four major bowl games on New Years Day, agreed today to move its kickoff up from noon to 11 a.m., CST, to accommodate television.

The American Broadcasting System had asked the Sugar Bowl to switch the game to Monday night, Jan. 3, but Sugar Bowl brass resisted and the network agreed to the compromise.

By moving the kickoff to 11 a.m., the Sugar Bowl will be starting two hours before the Cotton Bowl at Dallas.

Television ratings for this year's game between Tennessee and Air Force reportedly were cut in half when the Notre Dame-Texas match in the Cotton Bowl began one hour after the Sugar Bowl kickoff.

The Sugar Bowl's television contract—worth an estimated $500,000 per year—comes up for renewal after the 1972 game and game sponsors are anxious to improve their television audience.

The time for the 1971 game was moved up from 12:45 p.m. to noon to accommodate television.

"An 11 a.m. kickoff isn't going to be bad if we have a good match," said one Sugar Bowl source. "But then, if it's a good match, any starting time will be good. This is going to be a critical year for us. We must come up with two good teams."

Indians Tally 6 In Second Toward 6-2 FVA Triumph

NEENAH — Oshkosh High School concentrated all of its scoring in one inning to defeat Neenah, 6-2, in a Fox Valley Association baseball makeup Monday afternoon

Pelky and Parker each drove in two runs with their hits.

Neenah had several other scoring chances but stranded 11 runners, including nine in the first three innings.

Parker started for Oshkosh but was relieved by Steve Tesch in the third. Henry Murphy was Neenah's starter. Glen Rodgers took over in the second.

Both teams made five hits. Neenah's Pete LeCompte had two to lead all batters.

The result left both teams with 3-3 FVA records.

Police & Fire Beat

KAUKAUNA — John Wuellner, 632 Meade St., operator of Fox City Motel, reported to police the theft of a television set, valued at $200, from one of the motel units over the weekend. Police found entry had been gained through a rear window of the unit.

KAUKAUNA — Larry Hahn, 431 E. South River St., Appleton, reported to police that approximately 25 holes were shot into a boat moored near the Fox River canal sometime within the past few days. The boat is used by Sea Scouts.

Norman W. Paulson, 51, Fremont, sustained facial cuts late Saturday night when his automobile left Outagamie County Trunk CA at the Two Mile Road. Paulson, who had been westbound, told county traffic officers that he dosed at the wheel. He was taken to Appleton Memorial Hospital by Larry's ambulance.

John Rohloff, 18, 318 Lisbon Ave., Menasha, was sentenced to the Outagamie County jail for 10 days Monday after pleading guilty to a shoplifting charge. County Judge Nick F. Schaefer directed the term to begin June 14 after Rohloff has completed high school classes.

Rohloff took a pair of shoes from the K mart store Sunday. Schaefer, in ordering the jail term, noted a recent conviction for the same charge.

Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer set Sept. 7 for reviewing the shoplifting case of Mrs. Eleanor Ganzel, 46, 313 Doty St., Neenah, whose trial on the count was held Monday. She is accused of taking a package of cough drops and another of throat lozenges from the downtown H.C. Prange store April 14.

No verdict was reached during the brief trial. Schaefer said disposition of her case will depend on her conduct to that time.

The Appleton Fire Department early today used a smoke ejector to clear smoke from the home of Albert Giles, 613 S. Lee St., after an oil burner flooded.

Mrs. Ella Giesbus, 78, 417½ W. College Ave., was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital by the fire department rescue squad late Monday afternoon after she complained of chest pains at home.

OSHKOSH — Two men were treated at Mercy Medical Center Monday for injuries they received when the cars they were in collided on U.S. 41 South of here at 10:30 a.m.

Dennis Claasen, 25, route 3, New London, a passenger in one car, was treated for a bump on his head. Howard J. Mieritz, 63, Milwaukee, was treated for scrapes on his head and hands after his Jeep rolled over several times.

Winnebago County Police said a car driven by James F. Vaughn, 23, Marion, in which Claasen was a passenger and the Jeep driven by Mieritz, were both northbound on U.S. 41.

The Vaughn auto hit the Jeep in the left rear causing its driver to loose control and run off the road. Police said the Jeep, which rolled over several times in the ditch, was a total loss. The car was extensively damaged.

Kurz, Root Stock Trading Is Suspended

Secondary trading in the outstanding common stock of Kurz & Root Co., manufacturer of electrical equipment, was suspended Monday by the office of the state commissioner of securities.

Thomas Nelson, commissioner, said the trading suspension order was issued because current financial information concerning Kurz & Root was not available for public investors. Its stock has been trade on the over-the-counter market in the state.

The firm's latest fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1970, and it was required to file an audited financial statement with the commissioner's office within 120 days after the fiscal year end. No financial statement has been filed yet by the company, and the company advised the commissioner that it couldn't distribute its financial statement now, Nelson said.

The trading suspension order will remain in effect until the company files and distributes current financial information to its stockholders and the public. Under the terms of the order, broker-dealers may not effect any transactions in the stock except unsolicited agency orders to sell the stock for the accounts of present owners.

2 Valley Utilities Receive Awards For Achievement

KAUKAUNA — The Kaukauna Electricity and Water departments and the Menasha Electricity and Water Utility today were named winners of the E. F. Scattergood System Achievement Award at the American Public Power Association's (APPA) annual convention at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The honor is a result of a joint project linking the two neighboring electrical systems. The award is named for the late Los Angeles, Calif., municipal power pioneer.

The award recognizes achievements by municipal and other local publicly owned electricity utilities which enhance the prestige of public power and improve services to consumers. The Wisconsin systems were cited for the construction of an 11-mile, 138,000-volt transmission line between the two systems.

The interconnection of the systems permits the exchange of surplus power and provides for alternate power supply in the event of an emergency. Norbert D. Rhinerson, a director of APPA, is general manager of the Kaukauna departments. James W. Taylor is general manager of the Menasha system.

Austerity Paying Off, Report Says

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — About one in every 15 positions in state government is being filed is 40 per cent less than the rate over the past two years, Secretary of Administration Joe E. Nusbaum said in a report to Lucey.

Nusbaum enumerated five other "favorable and encouraging" results of Lucey's austerity program for the state bureaucracy:

—A savings of more than $7,000 a year in postage by using a Department of Transportation truck service to handle Department of Revenue correspondence between Madison and Milwaukee.

—Reductions of $15,000 to $20,000 yearly in premium overtime for employes in the Department of Health and Social Service.

—More than $35,000 worth of highway construction material saved through more efficient road building techniques.

—A $2,000 yearly reduction in armory operating costs by the National Guard.

—Saving $60,000 in air pollution monitoring equipment for the Department of Natural resources through the use of anew monitoring technique.

"These are only a few of the more unique savings which have been reported," Nusbaum said. "Many other agencies have reported numerous cost reduction actions in day-to-day operations."

Understanding of Allergies May Help in Finding Cure

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — April in New York and the sycamores and oaks pollinate.

Summer in the Midwest and the grasses, the plantain and the red top, pour forth. Autumn in Southern California and pollen from the mugwort and ragweed fills the air.

With the rhythms of the seasons, these and dozens of other trees, grasses and weeds throughout the country make life miserable for the person allergic to their pollen.

Even the very wind, rain and sun conspire against him.

But now, for the first time in many years, there is growing hope among scientists that significant advances against allergy may be relatively close, perhaps helping sufferers in this decade.

The chief hope lies in a growing understanding of the highly complex biochemical mechanism of the allergic reaction and the related possibility of developing new drugs.

31 Million Sufferers

If new relief is provided, it could affect many of the estimated 31 million Americans suffering from one or more significant allergies.

That new estimate revises upward earlier estimates of 22 million. It was made in January by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, a branch of the National Institutes of Health.

Nearly 13 million persons suffer from hay fever, another 8.2 million have asthma and yet another 8.2 million suffer from other allergies such as eczema, hives, food, drug and bee sting allergy.

This 1967 total of about 29.4 million is projected to 31 million for the country's 1971 population.

Sensitiviety Varies

Assuming one is allergic, the allergy depends to a great extent on how much pollen is in the air. Some hay fever sufferers sneeze at the smallest amount; other persons are less sensitive, but begin sneezing when the concentration increases.

The amount of pollen in the atmosphere depends a great deal on the weather. Heavy rains before the hay fever season lead to a lush growth of vegetation, and hence more pollen. Early morning sunshine drys the pollen, making it easier for the wind to carry it aloft. And windy days mean more pollen in the air, over a wider area.

Emotions, too, may trigger or aggravate an attack of asthma.

The basic problem of why the person reacts at all to what should be a harmless substance concerns a malfunction of the body's normal defense mechanisms, a malfunction that could ultimately be a genetic defect.

Antibodies Produced

The body normally produces antibodies, agents to fight such foreign substances as viruses. This is the reason the body tends to reject an implanted heart. In the allergic person, however, the defense mechanism, called the immunological system, produces antibodies to such things as grass pollen.

The grass pollen, for example, lands on the inside of the nose or lungs and its allergens are released. The allergen is called an antigen, just as the virus is an antigen. These antigens react with the antibodies erroneously produced by the body.

Somehow, this antigen-antibody complex produces chemicals that produce the actual allergic reaction—they make you wheeze or sneeze.

The key to helping the hay fever or asthma sufferer may lie in this biochemical reaction. In 1966, in a major fundamental discovery, Dr. Kimishige Ishizaka found what most allergists believe to be the specific antibody that causes the disease. It is called Immunoglobulin E, or IgE.

IgE is one of a number of immunoglobulins—gamma globulins. These antibodies are complex protein substances produced in bone marrow, spleen and elsewhere and found in blood and elsewhere.

Deeper Understanding

Because of this discovery, allergy researchers are coming to a far deeper understanding of just what's going on in the allergic process, and as a result may be able to devise new drugs to combat it.

Dr. Ishizaka, who did his work at the Children's Asthma Research Institute and Hospital in Denver, is now at Johns Hopkins University, with another leading researcher, Dr. Lawrence M. Lichtenstein.

"IgE is the antibody that causes the disease," Dr. Lichtenstein says. "Ninety-nine per cent of allergists are sure it causes the vast bulk of allergic disease."

As a result, Dr. Lichtenstein lists the two major factors in today's allergy research:

—"An understanding of the biochemical mechanism of the allergic reaction.

—"And the attendant possibility of new drugs."

New Drugs

"This increasing knowledge," he says, "should lead to the introduction of new drugs to combat allergy, and they seem to be just over the horizon."

One drug allergists are looking at with hope is disodium cromoglycate—DSCG—which was developed in England and is marketed there as Intal. It acts on the antigen-IgE complex, somehow interfering with the production of the chemicals that cause the wheezing.

A committee of the American Academy of Allergy has studied the drug and reported in February that it looks useful, especially against asthma. It is not yet in use in this country.

Other major work in allergy research is being done by Dr. K. Frank Austin at the Harvard Medical School, where he has worked with another drug, diethylcarbamazine, and is looking for others of the chemicals involved in producing allergic symptoms. The chemicals are called mediators.

Increasing Dose

At Johns Hopkins, Dr. Lichtenstein has been studying the effectiveness of giving allergy patients injections of the irritating substance itself in gradually increasing doses to build up the person's resistance. Though a time-honored treatment, it is controversial, time-consuming and not fully understood.

"We can indeed show," Dr. Lichtenstein said, "that the shots do have an effect, but a rather modest effect, not the dramatic improvement claimed for them in the past."

One attempt to improve this situation is under way at Hopkins. Dr. David G. Marsh worked up something called "allergoids" while at the California Institute of Technology.

"Allergoids" are chemically modified allergens, as a toxoid is a modified toxin. The chemical treatment is intended to decrease the unwanted allergic side effects in something like rye grass to be used for injections.

Early experiments in the test tube and on animals at Hopkins have been encouraging and the next step is to see how "allergoids" work in people.

"They're under trial," Dr. Lichtenstein says, "they're yet to be proven, but we may know something after this grass season."

Statue Rescued From Outside Air

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A bronze cast of Rodin's "The Thinker" is going to be kept inside the Baltimore Museum of Art permanently to protect it from air pollution.

The conservator who oversaw the statue's recent cleaning said the thick green crust of corrosive materials which accumulated in its 40 years in front of the museum had eaten the bronze down to a point it could not stand another cleaning.

Your Money's Worth

Nutritional Bargains Take a Little Study

BY SYLVIA PORTER

For each food dollar you spend, do you get more "nutritional value" in the form of protein from chicken or tunafish or lamb chops? What real savings can you achieve by switching to meat substitutes such as baked beans, eggs, cheese? Assuming there are bargains in these categories, how do you find them?

You will achieve spectacular cuts in your food market basket if you search out the nutritional bargains — those types and cuts of meats and meat substitutes which offer you the greatest possible amounts of protein and other key nutrients for each dollar you spend for food.

What's more, the nutritional bargain is becoming a major U.S. goal not only because it can save us money but also because we are constantly being found to be suffering, as a nation, from fundamental nutritional inadequacies.

So, first, I'll get right to the heart of the matter, with this table, prepared by the Agriculture Dept. and comparing perserving costs of various bargain meat substitutes versus hamburger. Each item on the list gives you comparable amounts of protein.

Item—Amount	Cost (cents) per Serving
2 slices American cheese	12
2 oz. Hamburger	11
2 Eggs	9
½ cup Cottage cheese	7
1 cup Pork & beans	7
4 tblsp. Peanut butter	6
1 cup Dry beans	3

Second, if you decide to eat egg dishes more frequently — as a low-cost meat substitute, here are the clues to egg bargains:

Porter

If the price of a dozen extra large eggs is less than one-ninth above the price of a dozen large eggs, the extra large eggs are a bargain.

If the price of a dozen large eggs is less than one-eighth above that of medium eggs, get the large ones.

If the price of a dozen medium eggs is less than one-seventh above that of small eggs, the mediums are the bargain.

If the price of a dozen large eggs is less than one-fourth above that of small eggs, the large eggs are a bargain.

Third, cheese is not as much of a protein bargain as eggs — or even hamburger. But, compared to steaks and chops, cheese offers a lot of nutrition for relatively little money.

Therefore, here are five key rules on how to get the most for your money in this key category:

—Stick to less-expensive domestic cheeses;

—Buy process cheese in place of "natural" cheeses, especially those marked aged and sharp;

—Get large chunks of cheese rather than more costly sliced or grated cheese;

—Choose pasteurized process cheese foods and spreads instead of plain cheese, although the latter may have more flavor.

—Avoid cheese from pressurized cans; obviously you pay plenty for this type of package.

Fourth, don't forget that bargains in milk — another good source of protein — do exist.

You can, for example, mix nonfat dry milk with fresh and slash your milk costs. You can get your milk at the supermarket or dairy store rather than have it delivered. You can buy plain, fresh, whole milk instead of more expensive buttermilk. You can use less expensive evaporated milk for cooking.

If you heed these facts and guidelines as you shop for food, you will get the most real value (in this case nutritional) for the fewest dollars and cents. And that's the real meaning of a bargain.

Tooth Pulled, Woman Dies

MILWAUKEE (AP)—A 32-year-old woman died at County General Hospital Friday after collapsing in a dentist's chair following the removal of an impacted wisdom tooth, the medical examiner's office said.

Mrs. Mary Lou Vander Pluym of suburban Elm Grove was administered a local anesthetic before the extraction, authorities were told.

An autopsy performed by Dr. Helen C. Young, county medical examiner, was inconclusive, and tissue and chemical tests were ordered.

Mrs. Vander Pluym, a professional model, was divorced and had four children at home.

Helping Hand

SEYMOUR — The engineer of a Green Bay and Western freight train stopped the train and got out Monday afternoon to aid a route 3 youth whose hand got caught in a corn picking machine on his father's farm.

Edward Stephani, 18, was satisfactory today at St. Mary Hospital, Green Bay, where he underwent surgery Monday afternoon, on his right hand.

Outagamie County police said Stephani was working on the farm of his father, Ervin, when, while apparently trying to free corn cobs, his right hand became lodged in rollers on the machine.

Stephani, police said, waved for help, and was noticed by the engineer in the freight train that passed within 1,000 feet of the farm. The engineer and other railroad personnel freed Stephani's hand, and summoned the Seymour rescue squad.

The farm is about a mile west of here.

Arrests Stunt Protest; Troops Leave Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Antiwar protesters' hopes of rekindling guerrilla-style efforts to halt the nation's government disintegrated today and the 4,000 federal troops from the streets and bridges of the capital.

Wholesale arrests of more than 7,000 persons Monday appeared to have broken the back of the planned three days of disruptions.

As the Marines, paratroopers and other federal troops began withdrawing from the capital, police reported another 360 arrests had been made today as demoralized bands of young people wandered the streets, apparently leaderless and without design.

Praise From Nixon

At a White House breakfast with Republican congressional leaders, President Nixon praised police, District of Columbia officials and the attorney general "for the way they handled demonstrators and the restraint exhibited," said Senate GOP Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

Scott said Nixon also reiterated that demonstrations for peace abroad did not include the right to break the peace at home.

The federal troops, who had moved into the city at the height of Monday's disorders, were pulled back to staging positions in the suburbs. But there was no move to return to their bases the 10,000 troops who had been mobilized during the weekend.

Of the total, 6,000 had not been deployed.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim told reporters that task force commanders have "begun to withdraw federal troops from the city" and expressed hope it was the "first step toward returning federal troops to their normal duties."

The disengagement of troops still left thousands of police to watch warily over the city.

Rush hour traffic—lighter than usual—moved smoothly.

Protest organizers, who had promised to send 10,000 persons into the streets today, talked of a mid-day march on the Justice Department.

But an early morning march from Washington Circle to Du-Pont Circle, two of the four traffic circles targeted for today's disruptions, resulted in most of the marchers being arrested.

Most of today's arrests came without incident and without the tear gas volleys and billy club swinging of Monday.

Charges of disorderly conduct, obstructing traffic, loitering or unlawful assembly were lodged against most of those arrested today—although several older, well-dressed, well-groomed pedestrians were arrested for jaywalking and hauled off in police paddy wagons.

Police vehicles did more to cause brief traffic jams than did the demonstrators.

Said one long-haired youth: "Everything has broken down today . . . some people are out of it."

Said another "I'm too tired."

Olive green Army helicopters fluttered over the city. One police center, circling over major commuter arteries, radioed that rush hour traffic was "better than normal" in several areas.

As the rush hour began, traffic flowed smoothly across the four Potomac River bridges which were the target of Monday's disruption. Street cleaning machines crisscrossed the bridges an hour before dawn to clear away a scattering of nails and tacks.

The demonstrators conceded police and military forces had prevailed a day earlier, when the largest groups tried to block the four major bridges into Virginia without lasting success. Marine and Army troops resumed their patrols of the bridges early this morning. The soldiers were spread no more than 20 feet apart on each span.

Wide Range

The disruptions Monday ranged from peaceful sitdowns at busy intersections to sheer vandalism. Hundreds of trash bins, bricks, bottles, and other debris were thrown into the streets. Many cars were abandoned at intersections, some set afire. Fuel lines were snipped on buses, and several motorists, including Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz., had their tires slashed.

There were several incidents of protesters exchanging blows with police, although reports of serious injuries were scant. About 100 persons were treated at area hospitals.

An Antiwar demonstrator, upper, gets pounced upon from both ends, and a girl demonstrator breaks into tears upon being arrested Monday during the massive demonstration in Washington which attempted to shut down the government. About 7,000 demonstrators were arrested during the course of the day. Troops helped keep traffic moving. (AP Wirephoto)

Courtroom Jam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Courtrooms in the nation's capital, where the slightest misdemeanor is a federal case, turned into an endless factory as judges worked overtime setting bond for 7,000 antiwar protesters arrested for disrupting the streets of Washington.

The bond was high in many cases, the judges tough, the process labored, the defendants uncertain.

Some lawyers contended the courts were trying to keep the demonstrators off the streets by setting excessive bail. The judges indicated the government is interested in convicting the demonstrators.

There were claims that some of those arrested had nothing to do with the waves of demonstrators who had played tag with police while slowing rush-hour traffic.

Out for Walk

A man identifying himself as a psychiatrist said six young persons under treatment for mental disorders were swept up by riot-garbed police near George Washington University. The patients and two attendants were said to have been arrested as they went for a therapeutic walk.

Dr. Benjamin Spock, the pediatrician, antiwar activist and one of the first released on bail, said a 12-year-old boy and a 13-year-old girl were held with 2,000 demonstrators in an outdoor compound until their parents arranged for their freedom.

Robert Hibbard, 28, of Austin, Tex., another released on $10 collateral, said the compound also held a little girl carrying school books, an Army lieutenant, several businessmen, an off-duty policeman, three medical students, a doctor and two nurses.

In the courtrooms, the wheels of justice turned slowly.

Twelve defendants had an idle moment in Judge Edward Daley's Superior Courtroom before their group was escorted from the jury box and another dozen hauled in from holding cells.

One youth in a t-shirt, blond hair tied behind his head, raised his hand to speak.

"Will we get something to eat, Your Honor?"

"The court has every assurance you will be fed," Daley said.

"It's been 12 hours," the youth pleaded, but was cut off by the judge.

"If you hadn't come to Washington, you wouldn't be in that spot. You're the people who started it."

The young man rested his head wearily on the rail of the jury box, listening to the disorderly-conduct charge lodged against him and most of the others. The maximum penalty is a $250 fine and 90 days in jail.

The usual bond is $10; Monday it was usually $250. Or, if a defendant could find a friend whose answers satisfied the judge, he could be released into the friend's custody pending trial.

Few of the demonstrators could post $250 bond and, after a trial date was set two or three weeks hence, they were shuttled back to jail, or to the holding compound on a practice field behind Robert F. Kennedy Stadium. As night fell, the compound was emptied into Washington Coliseum.

Even with eight judges in late-night sessions, the process was painfully slow.

And near midnight, Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson ordered jail clerks to release on $10 collateral those defendants charged with minor offenses.

Kent State Pays Tribute to Dead

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Flags rippled at half staff at Kent State University today while students carried flickering candles through long hours of a memorial vigil to the four students killed a year ago in a clash with National Guardsmen.

Leaders of a rebel May Day Coalition—their ranks thinned by the arrests of demonstrators in Washington—announced plas to test a campus ban against outside speakers. Plans to shut down by sit-in the campus ROTC facilities assumed a symbolic nature.

The university reported up to 5,000 students started the candlelight memorial tribute to their slain classmates Monday night. Only a dozen remained by their candles at daylight and seven of them huddled in sleeping bags.

Leftist Coalition

A bright crisp spring day killed the glowing effect the candles gave in the nighttime chill.

The coalition, which claims to represent 13 leftist organizations, announced plans to test a university ban on outside speakers during the memorial observance.

The coalition also is seeking to abolish a system of campus speakers, to have police disarmed, remove undercover agents from the campus and wants to have 25 indictments stemming from last year's disorders condemned.

The coalition also said it wants a state campus disorders law repealed.

Coalition organizer Ken Johnson said at least 30 members of the group are among the thousands of persons arrested in Washington, including Bill Arthrell, Kent Student and campus Yippie leader.

Gov. John J. Gilligan ordered flags on all state buildings flown at half staff today to honor the memory of the four students. He said, "This gesture will serve as a symbol of the necessity for all of us to work toward peace, tranquility and justice and to see that the tragedy of May 4, 1970, is never repeated.

"I hope that every Ohioen—and every American — has learned a lesson about violence. I hope each of us can see clearly that violence — even verbal violence—does nothing but tear our society to pieces."

Some 5,000 of Kent State's 19,432 students gathered for a candlelight vigil Monday night at the shooting scene near the campus' Blanket Hill.

Their faces glowing in the soft light of the candles many held, students formed circles around the spots where the four bodies lay a year ago.

Individual students stood motionless to mark the four spots. Students were to remain at each place, in half-hour shifts until midnight tonight.

In a memorial service at the school gymnasium, a member of the President's Commission on Campus Unrest which probed the Kent State shooting criticized President Nixon for failure to follow the commission's recommendation that the war in Indochina be ended.

"His response to this has been to sponsor an invasion of Laos and continue the slaughter," said James F. Ahren, former police chief of New Haven, Conn.

2 Pulitzer Prizes Given for Kent State Shooting Coverage

NEW YORK (AP) — Two Pulitzer prizes have been awarded for coverage of the Kent State University campus tragedy in which Ohio National Guardsmen killed four students and wounded nine others a year ago today.

The staff of the Akron, Ohio, Beacon Journal won the general local reporting award Monday for its work in piecing together the story of the shootings under deadline pressure.

In the arts, the 1971 Pulitzer prize for drama went to Paul Zindel's "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds"—the second year in a row an off-Broadway play won the award.

No Fiction Prize

For the first time since 1964 no fiction prize was awarded. The fiction jurors were reported to have offered three different candidates for awards: "Mr. Sammler's Planet," by Saul Bellow, "Losing Battles," by Eudora Welty, and "The Wheel of Love and Other Stories," by Joyce Carol Oates.

The award to the Akron Beacon Journal noted its balanced presentation of the campus events despite wild rumors. Robert H. Giles, managing editor of the Knight newspaper, said "We're delighted to have been so honored.

"We received a good deal of criticism from public officials and our readers at the time many of our stories were published," Giles added. "I think all of our stories stood the test of truth over the time since then."

Saw Body

Filo was a photo lab assistant at Kent State at the time of the tragedy. He had gone out for lunch with a borrowed camera and lens when the shooting began. He recalled seeing the body and the girl kneel beside it.

"There were students blocking my view so I moved to the left and waited. I was near the end of the roll of film and she was just looking down, crying, and then she let out with this scream and that's when I made the picture."

The Pulitzer prize for national reporting went to Lucinda Franks, 24, and Thomas Powers, 30, of United Press International for their background exploration of Diana Oughton, 28, killed in the explosion of a bomb factory in a Greenwich Village townhouse.

"We hoped the story would tell things about young people that needed to be told," said Powers, "and apparently, to at least some degree, we succeeded."

The prize for public service by a newspaper went to the Winston-Salem, N.C., Journal and Sentinel for their coverage of environmental problems including a successful fight against a proposed strip mining operation that would have blighted the beauty of northwestern North Carolina.

Environmental Impact

"We felt that if we told the people of the environmental impact of strip mining that they could make a decision wisely as to what it would do to their area," said Journal managing editor Fred Flagler.

The Pulitzer prize for international reporting went to Jimmie Lee Hoagland, 31, of the Washington Post for reporting on South Africa's apartheid system. "It is particularly ratifying to win on a story off the spot news," commented Ben Bradlee, the Post's executive editor.

William Jones, 31, of the Chicago Tribune, won the Pulitzer prize for special local reporting for an investigative series that exposed payoffs to police in the private ambulance industry.

Jones, who received news of the award while on his way to testify in court in another investigative case, recalled receiving threats in connection with the series. "I was forced to move my family out of the house for a week and I had a sheriff's deputy assigned to me," he said.

Second Prize

Paul Conrad was at work at the Los Angeles Times when he learned he had won his second Pulitzer prize in seven years for cartooning. He first won in 1964 while working for the Denver Post.

Conrad, 47, submitted 10 cartoons, one a particularly biting comment on the My Lai massacre. "Paul Conrad's work, often harsh, always controversial, is social criticism at the gut level," said Times editor Nick Williams.

(Conrad's editorial cartoons are run frequently in The Post-Crescent).

Speculators Nip Dollar's Value

U.S. Currency at Lowest Level in European Market

LONDON (AP) — Currency speculators sent the dollar reeling on European exchanges today, and the flood of U.S. money exchanged for West German marks, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs threatened to send inflation in Europe soaring further.

The dollar was on the floor in Frankfurt and Zurich. Only hours before by the Bank of England kept the rate just off the mandatory intervention point of $2.42 to the pound.

Anxiety over the monetary situation drove the price of gold up in the London and Zurich free markets. The jump was 43 cents in London to $39.86, the highest level since the 1969 crisis over the undervaluation of the mark.

West Germany's Central Bank was reported to have taken in $250 million to $300 million in the first hours of trading today and more than $120 million in the last hour Monday.

Zurich Sales

"Substantial" dollar sales were reported in Zurich. The smaller Amsterdam market was also caught in the flurry, with $20 million reported taken in late trading Monday.

The speculation apparently was touched off by the call from five West German economic research institutes Monday for the mark—now pegged at 27 cents—to be set free in world markets to combat inflation.

Speculators saw a chance of a quick profit, anticipating another upward revaluation of the mark that might even force the guilder and the Swiss franc to go up too.

Pain of Centralizing Can be Minimized

MADISON — The transition from a decentralized authority to a single head of government can be painful, but that pain can be minimized, Wisconsin's full-time county government leaders were told here Monday.

A county administrator from New Jersey and a county executive from New York told Wisconsin county executives, administrators and board chairmen how they handled the transition problem in their counties.

The discussion was during a conference on county leadership sponsored by the State Department of Local Affairs and Development in cooperation with the Wisconsin County Boards Association and the Institute of Governmental Affairs at the University of Wisconsin.

Alastair McArthur, deputy director of the National Association of Counties, related what he termed were the "seven pressure points of transition" which an administrator or executive must face.

The seven areas are the executives' relationship with the county board, the elected department heads, the appointed department heads, the heads of other local units of government in the county, the news media, the local state representatives and the citizens.

Budget is Key

Both Harry Daniels, elected executive of Oneida County, New York, and Guy Millard, appointed administrator of Somerset County, New Jersey, agreed that the key to their relationships with the county boards and other county officials is the budget.

The budget, Daniels said, "is the most important document we have." He said it is the one means the executive has of knowing exactly what is happening in the county and how he can control it.

Daniels said that his predecessor, who was the first executive in Oneida County, established a distinct line between the executive and legislative branches of the county, which has made his job much easier.

He also said that the first year in office required an "abnormal amount of time in a public relations role with holdover department heads and elected officials." He added that his relationship with the leaders of communities was good except with the "flamboyant mayor" of the county's largest city.

Since he has been executive, Daniels said that 99 per cent of his county's legislation originated in his office with no more than seven or eight legislative items starting in the county board.

37-Member Board

Oneida County, Daniels said, has about 275,000 people and has a 37-member county board organized much the same as Outagamie County's. The board and its committees each meet only once a month.

Somerset County also has about 275,000 people but is run by five part-time commissioners elected at large.

Millard said that his philosophy is "I want to rock the boat but quietly and privately. The last thing I want the citizens to think is that I am running the county."

He said that one of the best tools a county leader can have to accomplish something is strong support from his state legislative delegation.

Millard admitted that he did not think he could work the way he does if he had a county board the size of those in Wisconsin and New York.

Daniels also said that he did not like a 37-member board. "I would prefer fewer than 12," he said.

Both Daniels and Millard said that working through their department heads was the key to getting things done in the county.

Daniels said that he has the authority to fire any department head without having to go to the county board, but "they have complete authority in their own departments. I never bypass them."

Decorative Gaslight Plan Is Proposed at New London

NEW LONDON — Reactions were mixed but basically cool when four representatives of the Chamber of Commerce improvement committee introduced a gaslight proposal to the planning commission Monday night.

Gene Van Der Zee, co chairman, presented the preliminary proposal for the installation of decorative gas lamps along the area of the downtown streets that will be reconstructed.

There are two styles of lamps, one costing about $23.45 and the other $35.55. After installation they cost about $1.56 per month per light. With a total of 154 lights proposed for the area.

The purchase cost would be met by interested parties, with the possibility of the Chamber backing the project. The group then proposes that the city take the responsibility of paying the $2,900 per year operational costs, either directly or through assessment.

"This is an attempt to do something with the downtown area, to give the appearance of something new or unique for the person driving through, or thinking of staying," Van Der Zee noted.

Fits Theme

Marlin Fuerst, a member of the committee, added that the lights would fit into an Early American theme the Chamber hoped to propose for the city.

The light met with opposition from Planning Commissioner Adolph Pichelmeyer, who stated that he did not feel the light would do much more than add new poles to the downtown area. Pichelmeyer pointed out that the city was trying to eliminate poles by putting two parking meters per pole on the new downtown project.

He was told that the lamps could be put on the same poles as meters, which would also cut down on the number of lights. The committee did not have any information on how much the cost would be to mount the meters on the poles.

Rice Lake has a similar set up, but it was pointed out that the streets and sidewalks in that city are wider than those in New London and better adapted to the decoration.

Mayor S. W. Krostue also noted that he was not sold on the project — first because he feared it would add clutter, and second because of the costs of operation of a decoration.

Krostue also questioned the costs involved through the contractor for the downtown resurfacing. He added that the work on the downtown area should begin on May 10, and that this did not allow much time for committee to sell the business community or city in general on the project.

Flat Signs

James Cristy, another member of the Chamber committee, stated that he felt that something should be done to make the town look better. Included in his ideas was having all signs placed flat on the front of buildings, instead of the present common overhanging signs.

Adolph Pichelmeyer told the committee that it should work for such thigs as the extension of Shiocton Street, and expansion of the southside parking lots.

Another consideration made for the committee was working for more exits from the proposed Highway 45 by-pass. Mayor Krostue pointed out that while the work isn't scheduled until 1980, now is the time to get the work started.

On the matter of the lights, Van Der Zee pointed out that the committee would like to have gone through channels, but time did not permit it. Cristy added that the committee felt if something was going to be done under the sidewalk it had to be done now.

Krostue told the committee to present the matter at tonight's council meeting.

County Heads Ask Tax Relief, Home Rule

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — Wisconsin's full-time county government leaders told Gov. Patrick Lucey and other state officials here Monday that they want home rule for counties and that they need immediate property tax relief.

The 15 full-time executives, administrators and county board chairmen varied only slightly in relating their problems to the governor and officials of the state Department of Local Affairs and Development at a conference on county leadership.

The conference was sponsored by the State Department in cooperation with the Wisconsin County Boards Association and the Institute of Governmental Affairs at the University of Wisconsin.

Outagamie County Executive Alvin Woehler was one of the county leaders calling for home rule. He said the legislature must be responsive to the counties' request and soon. "The priority item is to have the state as responsive in actions as it is with the mouth." Woehler said, charging the state with unkept promises of aid to the counties.

Fail to Use

Lucey, who spoke at a noon luncheon, agreed that there is need for more home rule, but suggested that there is legislation in many areas which the counties are failing to use.

In response to a question on housing, Lucey said it may be necessary to have a statewide uniform housing code to help the housing industry. "This is one industry which has suffered not from bigness but from smallness," Lucey said. He indicated that the variety of housing codes and standards throughout the state has made it impossible to have large-scale housing construction.

The governor also defended his budget against charges of penalizing counties in the field of mental hospital aids. His plan calls for reducing mental hospital aids from 60 per cent to 50 per cent while increasing aids for mental health outpatient clinics from 40 per cent to 50 per cent.

Some county leaders have said this will cost their counties in excess of $250,000 a year in state aids.

Tremendous Cost

Lucey said studies have shown the cost is tremendous for inpatient treatment while many more patients can be treated for less money through that the costs were high and aid change, he said, is to encourage counties to use mental health clinics. He also said that if counties establish comprehensive mental health boards they would qualify for an additional 5 per cent in aid for both hospitals and clinics.

Woehler challenged Lucey on the $1,200 per month per capita cost of some of the state colonies. The governor agreed that the costs were high and said the colonies were not being spared from the state's austerity program. He said he would not reduce treatment standards to cut the cost.

The governor told the county leaders he was looking to them for guidance in developing legislation and programs to support county government.

During a round table discussion, Woehler agreed with Milwaukee County Executive John Doyne that assistance programs such as blind aid, disabled aid and old age assistance should be taken out of county welfare programs and put under Social Security to reduce the financial load on property tax.

County Planners

In the area of planning, Woehler and Fond du Lac County Executive Secretary Donald Flanders called for county planners with regional coordination rather than regional planning commissions.

Flanders said he believed planning was the most significant thing a county can do. But, he said, "I don't feel that regional planning is the answer. I feel that day-to-day contacts can sell planning much better." He said he did support regional planning for such things as water and air pollution control and transportation.

Woehler also called for county planners with a regional clearinghouse to coordinate planning efforts. He said he felt that both the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission and the Fox Valley Council of Governments should be discontinued.

'Planning by the Ton'

"There is no reason for us to continue to sponsor planning by the ton for others," he said of Northeastern.

Eugene Hollister of Walworth County, Wisconsin representative on the National Association of Counties' board of directors, also agreed on the planning issue, but said, "We must have social planning as well as physical planning. The social problems are the main problems right now."

Doyne, in addition to backing home rule for counties, called for more state action in other areas. He said the state should become involved in finding sites for solid waste disposal because of the problems local communities have in getting landfill sites. "The state should set aside areas for this," Doyne said

Reconstruction Review

Chamber Changes Date of Meeting

NEW LONDON — The need for immediate action on current matters has prompted the Chamber of Comerce to change the quarterly meeting date from May 12 to Wednesday, May 5.

The main concern will be a review of the reconstruction plans for the downtown area; and the correlation of activities, chamber President William Borchardt reported.

Of special interest to many of the businesses will be a report from the New London Improvement Committee, which is working on several ideas to be incorporated into the reconstruction.

"We want to get as many property owners and businessmen directly affected by the project as we can," Borchardt said.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. at Franklin Park Apartments.

The quarterly Chamber meetings were incorporated as an attempt to keep Chamber members informed on current problems at a time when they can help the directors formulate solutions.

Because of this policy, it was considered essential to move the date of this meeting ahead a week. The downtown reconstruction project is expected to start within a few weeks.

New Shiocton Chief Begins Work May 15

SHIOCTON — Eugene Bunnell will start work as the village's new police chief May 15.

Bunnell, 26, of route 1, Shiocton, was hired by the Village Board to replace Philip Calkins who resigned last January. Shiocton has been without full-time police services since then. Robert Nelson, an Outagamie County sheriff's deputy, has been working as a part-time policeman.

Clinton Tackman, chairman of the board's police committee, said Bunnell was one of eight candidates for the chief's job.

Bunnell, a native of the area, has had no previous police experience, but has had overseas duty with Marines. He has been working part-time at Cornland Fertilizer Co. here.

He and his wife have two children.

Bunnell becomes the fourth police chief here in five years. Raymond Muskavitch, who had held the job for several years, retired because of ill health. He was followed by Michael Reyes, now a county policeman, and by Calkins.

Senior Citizens to Meet

Psychologist Would Abolish System

Grades Attacked as Deterrent to Learning

WAUPACA — The grading system was attacked by Ted Heldt, school psychologist, as a hazard and deterrent to learning and a practice he would like to see abolished to enable each student to follow his own interest at his own rate and according to his own ability.

Heldt spoke Monday to 50 parents and teachers of the Waupaca PTA at its final meeting of the year. His services are contracted from CESA 7 and he spends Tuesday and Fridays in the Waupaca School District.

He presented some proposals for change in Waupaca schools, recommendations which he considers an important part of his duties. "I would change not allowing children to talk during their lunch period and I hate to see kids lined up and marching all over," he said.

Demoralizing to Kids

"Most importantly, I would like to see grades abolished, I think they are demoralizing to a lot of kids. The trouble is that we have not come up with a reasonable alternative. Under the system, we know that by the time an underachiever hits fourth grade and he is getting low grades, he starts goofing off when he can't compete.

"When kids see themselves as dumb, they react, and that is a bad thing. It does encourage failure and it often becomes a viscious circle, discouraging the child to learn," he added.

His comments launched an audience discussion of the merits and faults of a grading system during a question and answer session.

Supt. Len Brittelli said that the grading system is comparing youngsters with youngsters rather than showing the improvement of the individual child.

Asks for Suggestions

"What kind of grading system would you like to have us use?" Principal William Williams asked the parents after a show of hands favoring a change in the grading system.

"We are required to send a record of achievement from grade school to high school and likewise from high school to college for each student. I am certain that a statement of 'satisfactory' or 'unsatisfactory' would not be acceptable. There has to be some reporting method and we would be happy to listen to any and all of your ideas.

"We have studied the proposals of educators who say don't give grades, don't use numerals, don't use letters and have tried grading students' work as 'satisfactory' or 'unsatisfactory' but it doesn't work out," he added. "We are trying in elementary to give you a report that you can understand."

Sectional Grouping

Heldt was asked what he thought of the sectional grouping used in junior high school. "It's good and its bad and I would look for other alternatives," he answered. "From the teaching standpoint it is good, because you have boys and girls of the same learning ability. For the kids it's bad, because if they are set apart and see themselves as dumb, they react."

The best progress is made and the child's interest is greatest when parents are interested in the child and work with the teacher," Heldt said. A grade is still the method most commonly used to show the child he has to work harder, that he's doing all right, that he has his reward. Some students are motivated to learn by earning good grades; for some it works, but for the majority, it does not, he said.

Heldt explained his work in the Waupaca schools, which is done on a referral basis from teachers, guidance counselors, health aides, nurses and parents.

Not All in Trouble

"I may see a child who has learning difficulties, one who is making inadequate progress, one who is not working up to capacity or one who displays unusual behavior in class," he explained. "However, there is the popular misconception that all I do is see the child who is in trouble.

"Some parents think that if I see their child he immediately will go to special education or something is wrong with him. Some kids are afraid to see me because I am 'a head shrinker and they are crazy.' This is not true. Most of the children I see do not have emotional problems and I see some very intelligent children," he stated.

The psychologist takes intelligence, achievement and subjective tests to get a picture of the child. He talks with him, talks with the teacher who has made the referral and often with the parent to develop a consistent approach for correcting the problem. A follow up is made in two to three weeks, to see if it is working.

New London Boy Hurt In Hit-Run Accident

NEW LONDON — A six-year-old youth sustained a bump on the forehead, skinned nose, and bruises in a hit-and-run car-pedestrian accident, shortly after 6 p.m., Sunday.

Joseph Schuette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schuette, 513 E. Beacon Ave., was struck by an auto traveling south on Shawano Street, near the Beacon Avenue intersection, and knocked to the edge of the road.

The child was taken to Community Hospital for treatment, and then released. He is reported in good condition at his home.

The driver of the auto that struck the youth admitted to the accident when questioned by police Monday afternoon. He is Larry C. Roloff, 19, 1317 Division St., New London.

Roloff told authorities that an auto had turned from Beacon Avenue in front of his auto, and raised a dust cloud. He stated that he did not see the youth, but heard the thump on his auto.

Roloff stated that he stopped his car, his passenger looked out, and saw a boy standing on the sidewalk. Since he thought the child was the one struck, and was okay, he continued on.

The youth was not the same one, and the injured boy was taken to a neighbor's house, and then to the hospital. Roloff was cited following the incident.

Pulaski Deals Bonduel '9' 11-8 Setback

PULASKI — Mike Cooney's sixth inning double provided Pulaski with the go-ahead runs as the Raiders dealt Bonduel an 11-8 loss in a non-conference game here Monday afternoon.

A single by Rick Liss and a walk put two runners on to set the stage for Cooney's heroics.

Jm Mraccynski relieved Paul Reidinger in the third inning and received credits for the win. Mraccynski struck out three and allowed one free pass.

Tom Kroll started for Bonduel and was replaced in the fifth inning by Mike Boettcher, who absorbed the loss.

Friend Unable to Pull Gregory Schudy From Center of Pond

NEENAH — Gregory Schudy, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Schudy, 218 N. Lake St., drowned about 6:30 p.m. Monday after trying to swim across an abandoned stone quarry.

According to Winnebago County Coroner Duane Moore, the boy, his brother and two companions were trying to catch frogs at the quarry when Gregory decided to take a swim before going home.

Moore said the boy got about halfway across the quarry when he shouted to his companions for help because he had a cramp.

One of the friends, also 11, jumped in and swam out to him, but was unable to pull the boy to shore.

Menasha Police Department skin divers were called out to start searching for the boy and he was found after about one and one-half hours in about 20 feet of water.

Funeral arrangements are pending at the Taylor Funeral Home in Wisconsin Rapids.

Survivors include the parents, an older sister and two younger brothers.

MARION — A 6-run first inning got Marion's baseball team off to a good start, and the Mustangs went on to rout Weyauwega, 12-1, in a non-conference game here Monday.

It was Marion's seventh straight victory without a loss this season.

Kent Brandenburg, Goodwin Peterson and Steve Kristof combined to hurl a 2-hitter for the Mustangs The 'Wega trio of Dave Aegerter, Steve Baitenger and Jerry Nolan gave up six hits.

After the Indians went scoreless in the top of the first inning, Marion went to work for four of its safeties in the bottom of the first.

Raps Triple

Bary Beyersdorf started the uprising with a triple, and then Brandenburg singled him in Five walks in a row plated two more runs, and Kevin Thiel singled in the fourth marker Peterson's 2-run single wrapped up the burst.

Marion added four runs in the third without a hit, and two more in the sixth when Steve Niemuth doubled in a run and later stole home.

Weyauwega's lone run came in the third when Chip Wall walked and scored on Doug Gehrke's double J. P. Nolan's triple was the only other Indian safety.

Steiger Tells Plan For New Cabinet

President Nixon's proposed executive branch reorganization would eliminate a cabinetry formed over the years to serve pressure groups and would create departments without overlap and proliferation, U. S. Rep. William Steiger, R-Oshkosh, said Monday.

Steiger told Neenah-Menasha and Appleton business leaders that the plan — geared to service and function — would eliminate a situation which has been recognized by presidents since Franklin D. Roosevelt's time.

Nixon is the first president, however, to propose a change of such scope and magnitude, he said, and as a result, there will be much opposition, as each opponent picks out his minute point to grumble about. The plan would reduce the departments from seven to four.

Steiger's comments on the reorganization were among several he made while fielding questions at a joint meeting sponsored by the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce's revitalized national affairs committee. More than 50 persons attended the breakfast meeting.

The third - term congressman spoke briefly and then opened the meeting to questions ranging from regional planning to the effect of his health and safety act on industry to Nixon's welfare proposals

Defends Proposals

He defended his and Nixon's proposals on certain subjects and expressed his opinion on chances for bills as well as his opinion of them.

Among his responses, he said:

— Nixon probably will endorse a minimum wage increase. He said that traditionally the minimum has been kept at about 50 per cent of the average hourly wage and it has fallen now to about 46 per cent. One proposal is to raise it from $1 60 to $1.80 in January and $2 in January, 1973.

The controversial aspect, he said, is the proposed extended coverage to farmers, state and local government employes and others

— U S Rep Wilbur Mills, D-Arkansas, chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, is "more of a candidate for the presidency than anyone recognizes"

— There may a series of construction strikes in June when contracts expire across the nation. He said he knew no answer to the wage stabilization problem but suggested that areawide bargaining might be a possibility.

— He has received a petition from 1,400 area residents for keeping rail service but noted a major consideration must be that it is a mistake to keep a service unless it would be used That's not government's proper role, he added

— There is a need for more flexibility in federal funding of education to give local districts more decision-making powers in use of the funds He said there's no easy answer to present restrictive funding — which one person commented has seemed to put too much weight on the disadvantaged child

— There is a need for a welfare program that breaks the welfare cycle and provides incentive to get off the program. Steiger endorsed a plan which provides training, incentive to find work and equity but noted it will cost more because it expands coverage to the working poor.

— He couldn't say what chances the Fox River has for the proposed federal water management project except that it was among those being considered. The decision, he added, will revolve around timely local proposals, community support shown and the Environmental Protection Agency's — the grantor — reactions to proposals.

Forum Slated

He directed a question on what can be done locally to John B. Torinus, editor of The Post-Crescent Torinus announced a May 27 one-day forum to be sponsored by The Post-Crescent at The Pioneer Inn, Oshkosh, where the river management project will be discussed. The hope, he said, is to present a concept of a regional management structure for the Lower Fox and Lake Winnebago and establish a committee to take up the local effort, coming up with a plan to supplement local industries' and municipalities' efforts to clean up the water.

— That the federal government probably doesn't have solid long range regional planning goals because there's always the chance that Congress "can change the game plan."

Steiger also said he didn't expect the general revenue-sharing idea to pass this congressional session but that certain block grant proposals might.

He also predicted a collision between Nixon and Congress on stimulating the economy. All major economists say the economy is improving, he said, the unemployment rate should be declining soon.

Steiger said that Congress should look for tools to provide long range stimulation of the economy.

Sanguine Plan Won't Work, Scientists Say

UW Professors Hit Navy Project on Technology Aspects

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — University of Wisconsin scientists asserted Monday that the Navy's proposed Project Sanguine communications system in northern Wisconsin is not technically feasible.

"The Navy's announced input power, under the most optimistic conditions, leads to a transmission time of nearly two hours to send a simple 12-letter message," the researchers said.

Their findings were made available through the Wisconsin Committee for Environmental Information. The committee some time ago issued a report on nuclear power urging the state to tighten regulations on the emissions of radioactivity from atomic power plants.

The technical report on Sanguine, prepared by Profs. Michael McCintock, Paul Rissman and Alwyn Scott, said bluntly the Navy's proposed facility to communicate to nuclear submarines at sea won't work

The report said foreign nations could jam the system and make it useless as a communications link in a "last strike" weapon system to deter enemy attack.

In citing the time that would be needed to move a brief message via the undergound network of equipment, the study said. "Power input to the antenna can be increased to decrease the transmission time, but again under the most optimistic conditions, it would take the entire electrical out put of several large power generating plants to reduce the transmission time to one minute"
